ADAMS HOUSE PORTERS JOIN STRIKE

RESUME DYNAMITE HEARING

The Grand Jury investigation of the plot to plant dynamite in Lawrence at the time of the textile strike, which has already resulted in the arrest for conspiracy of William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, Frederick E. Atteaux, a dealer in dyes and mill supplies, and Dennis J. Collins, a dog fancier of Cambridge, was resumed today, the secret conversing at 9:30 o'clock.

A dozen or more witnesses had been summoned, one of whom was Collins. He is still locked up in the Charles Street Jail in default of $6,000 bail for conspiracy and the illegal transportation of dynamite, and it was necessary to bring habeas corpus proceedings to get him to the Court House.

Among the other witnesses who appeared at the Court House were:

Pitman's Aide a Witness.

Charles H. Littlefield, Jr., of Lawrence, secretary to Ernest W. Pitman, the $250 city lawyer, was committed on subpoena rather than appear before the Grand Jury.

Former City Marshal James T. O'Sullivan of Lawrence.

Captain William H. Proctor of the State police.

F. G. R. Gordon, United States Commissioner of Immigration.

John P. Ryan, State armorer.

William S. Jewett, the son of a Lawrence publisher.

Mr. Pelletier appeared before the Grand Jury in person. The first witness to go into the Grand Jury room was Mr. Littlefield.

District Attorney Pelletier today denied the report that Pitman had given him the story of the conspiracy at a casual meeting at Young's Hotel, not realizing that he was involving himself and friends in the trouble.

"I never knew and never saw Mr. Pitman," said Mr. Pelletier, "until he came to my office in the courthouse and told me his story in my official capacity."

Many persons were in and about the courthouse today drawn there by the excitement attendant upon the continuation of the dynamite investigation.

Drop Federal Probe.

United States District Attorney French in a statement issued at the Federal Building today declared that there would be no Federal Grand Jury investigation in connection with the so-called Lawrence dynamite plot. Mr. French says:

"Upon the report of Special Agent De Belle, who was assigned to investigate any violation of Federal law incident to the transportation of dynamite to Lawrence, there appears to be no evidence that it was obtained in any other State than Massachusetts. There is, I believe, no violation of the Federal statutes and the Federal Grand Jury will not be asked to make an investigation."

Taft Sees Opening of Maine Election at Biddeford Pool

BIDDEFORD, Sept. 9.—President Taft, who is a guest of his brother, Charles P. Taft, at Biddeford Pool, having reached here yesterday evening by automobile from Beverly, saw the beginning of today's voting at the Pool. This section is Ward 1 of Biddeford, a rock-ribbed Republican district composed largely of fishermen voters.

The President was cheered at various places he appeared. He seemed to be in a cheerful humor and to be satisfied with the situation, although in this city and Portland particularly, because of dissatisfaction over the appointment of the collector of the port at Portland, there is a strong Bull Moose feeling.

The President will return to Beverly tonight.

CLAIM RAYMOND WAS MURDERED

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—An autopsy held today on the body of Arthur Raymond, known in the baseball world as "Rube," disclosed a number of injuries which are believed to have caused his death. The coroner has called in the police and a careful investigation is being made.

It is believed the eccentric pitcher may have been murdered. His skull was fractured and other wounds and abrasions were discovered. Raymond was found dead Saturday in a room in the Hotel Velez.

Raymond has been known to have got into a number of street fights in the past. It is possible that he got into a dispute with somebody last week while under the influence of liquor and that it ended in his death.

There is also a veil of mystery surrounding the death of President Noyes of the Washington Club. It will be remembered that after the Senators' president was found dead, one of the bis servants claimed that he had seen a Washington police officer beating him with a club. The police of the Capitol City are still investigating the case, but nothing definite has yet been done.

100 MUTINEERS IN RUSSIAN GARRISON SLAIN BY LOYALISTS

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 9.—Mutiny broke out today in the Russian army stationed in the government of Vilna, in Lithuania, and in a battle between loyal troops and the rebel soldiers 100 mutineers were slain and 200 wounded.

The troops which mutinied were sappers stationed in the barracks at Grodno, after the uprising they seized the barracks and defied the loyal military authorities to oust them. A regiment of infantry was sent against the sappers. The foot soldiers drove the deserters from the quarters by a galling fire. The casualties among the loyal troops are not stated.

WOMAN JAILED IN LARCENY CASE

In the Dorchester court today Mae E. Stanton, twenty-two, of No. 18 Hancock street, Dorchester, was sentenced to Sherborn Reformatory for the larceny of $25. She appealed. It was alleged that she got the money from David Pitenof of No. 1,391 Dorchester avenue, a second-hand furniture dealer, on furniture she had bought on the installment plan.

The woman had Frank H. Stanton in court a week ago for non-support, but he repudiated her, saying she was not his wife. Stanton was ordered to pay her $5 a week. In court today she said she wanted the money to go to New York for a certificate to prove that she was properly married.

DIXIE AT NEWPORT WITH 19 DESTROYERS

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 9.—The flagship Dixie of the Atlantic torpedo flotilla has arrived from Provincetown, accompanied by nineteen torpedo boat destroyers. The vessels have been engaged in torpedo practice and will leave here Thursday or Friday for gun practice on the southern drill ground. They will return about October 1 for steaming trials.

BOARD REPORTS ON CONDITION OF CROPS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—A report issued today by the crop reporting board, Department of Agriculture, estimates the condition of crops on September 1 as follows: Corn 82.1, Spring wheat 90.8, Fall wheat 94.8, oats 92.8, barley 88.9.

BIG VOTE IS POLLED IN MAINE

I predict the re-election of Governor Plaisted of Maine by 10,000 at least, the election of my Democratic Legislature and three of the four Democratic Congressmen.—Mayor Fitzgerald, who stumped for candidates.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 9.—Indications throughout the State of Maine show that a record vote is being cast in the election today. With ideal weather conditions prevailing and both parties working with their utmost to get out every voter, the polls up to noon showed that in every city and town in the State the ballots cast were far more than in any previous State election.

Records Are Broken.

In this city all records had been broken at noon time. The Democratic vote was unusually heavy. Conservative Republicans estimate that this city will be carried by the Democrats by 200 to 800 majority. Democrats claim the city by between 1,500 and 1,800.

Interest in the balloting in this city centres about the contest between Michael F. O'Brien, Democratic candidate for Congress, against Asher C. Hinds, Republican, who is seeking re-election. Early voting showed that considerable cutting was being done by both parties.

As to the probabilities of today's outcome, even the Maine newspapers decline to make forecasts. Everybody admits that it will be extremely close. The party of Blaine and Reed and Dingley and Boutwell is not what it used to be. It has got one back eye from the Democrats and it is not at all sure that the other will not be the same color tonight.

Governor Plaisted expects to be returned to office by at least 12,000 votes. William T. Haines of Waterville, the Republican candidate, predicts his own election by 10,000.

Think Gardner Safe.

Most of the unprejudiced expect the farming communities to elect a Democratic Legislature, and thus make sure of the return of Obadiah Gardner to the Senate at Washington. A Republican Legislature would mean the election to the United States Senate of the Republican successful in the primaries.

This Republican is Edwin C. Burleigh, an Augusta millionaire, seventy years of age and a Stand-Patter whose newspaper is outspokenly for William H. Taft for President.

The Democratic candidates for Congress are Michael T. O'Brien in the First, or Portland district; Congressman Daniel J. McGillicuddy in the Second, or Lewiston district; Congressman Samuel W. Gould in the Third, or Augusta district, and Mayor Charles W. Mullen of Bangor in the Fourth, or eastern district.

Their Republican opponents are Congressmen Asher C. Hinds, Bank Examiner William B. Skelton, Forrest Goodwin of Skowhegan and Congressman Frank E. Guernsey of Dover.

WILLIAM SCHEPPS, GARDENER, ATTEMPTS SUICIDE WITH KNIFE

William Schepps, seventy-seven, of No. 22 Gardner avenue, in the Savin Hill section of Dorchester, tried to kill himself by cutting his throat with a table knife early today. He was discovered by his son, Alfred J. Schepps, in time to save his life. Mr. Schepps has been a gardener for many years and was well known in the fashionable Hill section. He had been despondent following a stroke of paralysis.

CONTINUE CASE OF ROBERT FANNING

Charged with assaulting Reserve Officer John T. Hoar with a bottle in a liquor raid at No. 198 Vernon street, Roxbury, last night, Robert Fanning of No. 29 Wyman street, the convict pardoned by Governor Foss the February, appeared before Judge Williams of the Roxbury Court today. His case was put over for a hearing until Friday. Fanning was serving from six to nine years for burglary when Governor Foss pardoned him after he had served three years. He was the youngest prisoner ever pardoned, being but twenty-two. He is alleged to have hit Reserveman Hoar in the face with a bottle, inflicting a wound that required eleven stitches. Bridget Jenkins, arrested for an alleged illegal sale of liquor to Reserveman Hoar at the same house, defaulted.

DEATH TAKES MRS. M'LEAN

BAR HARBOR, Me., Sept. 9.—Mrs. John R. McLean, the wife of the Cincinnati and Washington newspaper publisher, died here at 6:20 a. m. today.

The great race made to save her life by Dr. Llewellyn Barker of John Hopkins University, who reached her bedside at 8:08 p. m., Sunday, after traveling 1,631 miles from the North Carolina woods, in less than forty-one hours, was lost.

At her side when she passed away were her husband, their son, Edward B. McLean, and Mrs. McLean's sister, Miss. Bakhnteff, wife of the Russian Ambassador.

In spite of everything that loving care and skilful medical assistance could do, Mrs. McLean succumbed to an attack of pneumonia.

Realizing that the life of his wife was in grave danger, Mr. McLean summoned Dr. Barker, specialist in pulmonary diseases, who was found in a North Carolina camp. The trip from the South, made in

CARDINAL BACK FROM EUROPE

Cardinal O'Connell returned to America today after a vacation in Europe. He reached New York on the liner Rotterdam. He will return to Boston this week.

The Cardinal had not announced on what vessel he intended to sail for home and there was doubt as to just when he had planned to return from his vacation. The first news came today with his arrival in New York. The liner docked at 9 a. m. It had even been stated that the Cardinal was a passenger on the Laconia, which is due in Boston tomorrow.

The Cardinal, accompanied by Monsignor M. J. Splaine, rector of the Cathedral, sailed from New York seven weeks ago for a vacation tour of the cathedral cities of Germany, Belgium and the south of France. It is expected Monsignor Splaine may arrive in Boston either Wednesday or Thursday.

Cardinal O'Connell will resume his duties in the archdiocese on September 23. The cardinal will preside over the retreat at Brighton upon his return to the city. The cardinal and Mgr. Splaine expressed themselves as delighted with their quiet vacation trip. The cardinal, who was considerably fatigued when he went abroad said that he was in the best of health and had returned completely refreshed.

Parade, in Defiance of Police, to Be Held After Conference.

Strikers in the J. Reed Whipple hotels of Boston—Hotel Touraine, the Parker House and Young's—and officials of the new hotel workers' union, after a conference at their headquarters, No. 724 Washington street, voted to send a committee of seven to confer with Edgar Pierce, president of the Whipple company, before the announced parade and demonstration in the street.

FORMER EMPLOYES AT CONFERENCE.

The committee sent to see Mr. Pierce consisted of two men from each of the three hotels affected and one representative of the union, all former employes of the Whipple company.

It was understood by the strikers that Mr. Pierce wanted to meet a committee, and it was as a result of this that the committee was chosen. Mr. Pierce denied that he had asked that a committee be appointed to see him.

"I have no desire to see a committee from this particular union," said Mr. Pierce. "If, however, a committee of former employes wish to wait upon me I am perfectly willing to meet them. But that meeting would be as a meeting between individuals, not as a committee from any union."

Guests Being Served.

Mr. Pierce said that all of the three hotels were getting along very well and that the normal capacity of guests were being served. He said that so far as he was concerned the strike in his hotels was over.

Quit Adams House.

The Adams House porters, or at least eight out of ten, decided at noon today that they would quit. They walked out quietly. Thomas Shine, the head porter, and the second porter remained on the job. One of the strikers said:

"We have to give up all of our tips to the head porter, even if it is only a nickel, or we lose our jobs. We get $25 a month and our food. We room out."

George B. Hall, the manager of the Adams House, said:

"I guess some of the porters have struck. We had no notice of it."

At the Vendome some of the porters took another view of the matter of tips. They kept them. When the head porter found this out he discharged those who had pocketed tips.

The waiters at Hotel Essex, before making any move in unison with other waiters of the city, appointed a committee to talk the situation over with Manager J. F. Quinn. Mr. Quinn received the committee which was composed of G. K. Arbden, Thomas O'Neil and J. Countance.

Yield to Demands.

The waiters wanter their salaries raised to $35 a month, a day off each week with pay for half of them, better working conditions, sanitary conditions and not required to pay for breakages. Manager Quinn said that he would pay the standard wages of men less than $35 and he granted the other requests.

Edward Blochlinger, the organizer of the

VEDRINES FLIES 105 MILES HOUR

AVIATION FIELD, Chicago, Sept. 9.—Jules Vedrines, French aviator, completed the 124.8 miles of the international cup race today in 70 minutes and 55 seconds. He was the first of the aviators in the air for the race. His average speed was about 105 miles an hour.

All American speed records were shattered by the marvelous flight of the Frenchman in his Deperdussin monoplane. Over the heads of a crowd that numbered thousands, the birdman sent his stub-winged, strong-bodied racer. The exhaust of its 124-horsepower engines, sounding in a continuous roar like a battery of overhead Maxims, was lost in the cheering of the air fans as the machine swept around the Clearing course. The driving of the race was daring in the extreme.

Keeping close to the ground, flying perfectly straight away, except at the turns, the Frenchman shaped the course to the very last inch. Most of the race was done at an altitude of not more than 100 feet and part of the time it seemed as though the daring aviator would strike the steel pylons marking the turns, so close did he keep to earth. After finishing the race when the flag had indicated that the distance was completed, Vedrines swung once more around the course, holding his terrific pace for 31 laps. The time for the 31 laps was 73 minutes 17.57 seconds.

U. S. ARMY READY TO INVADE MEXICO

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Orders have been issued to hold the entire United States regular army in readiness for action. This indicates that government officials expect intervention in Mexico within a short time.

Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff, today announced that his forces were ready for any presidential order. It is said that the Twelfth Cavalry, now at Presidio, Cal., will be the next regiment to go to the border.

SECRETARY KNOX IS WELCOMED IN JAPAN

YOKOHAMA, Sept. 9.—Secretary of State Knox, special representative of the United States at the funeral of Emperor Mutsuhito, arrived here today on board the cruiser Maryland. The Japanese battleship Fuji and the armored cruisers Iwate and Yakiwa met the Maryland and conveyed her into the harbor. Mr. Knox was received at the pier by the Governor, the Mayor and other notables, as well as by a number of American residents of Yokohama. Later Mr. Knox said party left for Tokio.

STRIKE OF 200,000 MENACES ENGLAND

NEWCASTLE, Eng., Sept. 9.—A national shipbuilding strike involving over 200,000 men may result from tomorrow's conference here between the masters and the men over renewal of the labor contract which expired today. The Boilermakers' Union, which is a part of the Federation of Shipwrights, is strongly opposed to renewing the contract and is urging a strike.

WANTS PLANS FOR SCHOOLBOY STADIUM

A request for the appropriation of $2,000 to secure plans for a schoolboy stadium was sent by Mayor Fitzgerald to the City Council this afternoon. The Mayor further requested the Council to consider a large appropriation for additional sewers and to take definite action on the consolidation of the park, public grounds, bath and music departments.

SUPT. DYER AND MAYOR CONFER

Franklin B. Dyer, Boston's $10,000 superintendent of schools, conferred with Mayor Fitzgerald at City Hall today.

It was the first meeting since the new superintendent has taken up his duties and the Mayor outlined what improvements he felt could be made in the school system. The continuation school, which was one of the features of the Cincinnati school system, was discussed and the superintendent promised to give the Mayor details as to his plans for establishing such a school in Boston.

One of the results of the conference will be the framing of a bill to be presented to the next Legislature calling for compulsory education up to sixteen years. At present the age limit is fourteen years. The additional two years in the schools would not be for the full school term, but for seven hours a week, the remainder of the time of the pupils being occupied in industrial and commercial establishments.

Changes at the Mechanic Arts High School were suggested by the Mayor.

Before any bills are presented to the Legislature on school matters Superintendent Dyer has agreed to confer and discuss with the Mayor the proposed changes.

STRIKERS PLAN MORE DEMANDS

new union, stated that the officers of the stationary firemen's and engineers' unions had promised financial and moral help to the strikers, and, if necessary, would call a general strike.

An official of the engineers' union denied this. He said that so far as he knew Blochlinger had not consulted with them.

Blochlinger announced that he would see Mayor Fitzgerald this afternoon and try to get Faneuil Hall for a meeting this evening.

Blochlinger declares that there are 545 on strike at the three hotels, while President Pierce says that there are only 165 out.

Manager Hart of the Touraine said:

"We will have nothing to do with Organizer Blochlinger. This strike is not justified. We are treating our employes fairly. None of the hotels are giving their employes better treatment. We have granted them two days off a month. The cooks get a day off each week."

"Are the strikebreakers you have here those that were here in the Elevated car strike?" Mr. Hart was asked.

"Well, I don't know, but it doesn't make any difference if they can do the work for us does it?" he replied.

Detectives on Guard.

"Are the men you are now getting experienced?"

"Yes," he replied, "the men who came from New York were sent us by a hotel agency, and that means that they are experienced."

Manager Hart said that there are three detectives always on hand now to protect the help and guests from any disturbance.

The disturbance of last night he termed an outrage and a disgrace to the city. "This trouble is only going to prove disastrous to business in Boston," he said. "People are going to hear of it and go elsewhere to do their shopping and business," he said.

Organizer Blochlinger declared that the striking waiters would hold their parade despite any police interference. No permit had been issued for the parade and the police were expected to stop it.

The plans call for a march from the union headquarters at No. 724 Washington street, through Washington and some of the principal streets, finally ending at City Hall, where it was planned to see Mayor Fitzgerald.

Say Women Are Brave.

"Let them arrest until the cells are all filled. We will parade with what are left," Mr. Blochlinger declared.

"How about the women?" he was asked. "Will you permit them to parade and be liable to the indignity of an arrest?"

"The women have just as much courage as the men," he replied. "They'll help out. We'll hold the parade."

Attorney Thomas G. Connolly and two organizers of the International Hotel Workers' Union, Albert L. Kiber of New York and John Pappas of No. 9 Appleton street, were locked up at the Lagrange street police station last night during the strike demonstration and appeared in the Municipal Court today to answer charges of breach of the peace.

The arrests of these men quieted the several hundred marching strikers and their sympathizers, who had made things lively by their demonstrations about the down-town hotels, cheering, hissing and jeering as they surrounded the hostelries.

Connolly was arraigned before Judge Quinn today and pleaded not guilty to a charge of disturbing the peace. He was held for trial on Wednesday. He was released on bail in $100. The cases of Kiber and Pappas were continued until Wednesday, also. They were also released on bail.

Within Law, Says Connolly.

Connolly, in a statement to the press, said:

"I was arrested for disturbing the peace. I committed no violation of the law. We had a right to parade and we needed no permit. We were not creating any disturbance nor were blocking traffic. It was at the corner of Lagrange and Tremont streets, when a big man dressed in civilian attire told me to go back.

"I asked him what for and he said because he said so. I refused and he grabbed me by the shoulder and almost knocked me to the grounds. He then told me that he was a police officer and that I was under arrest. He appeared much surprised when he learned that I was an attorney for the strikers and not one of them."

Sergeant Fitzgerald, who was lowered in rank because of his part in the Tech-Dartmouth riots a few years ago when a number of students were brutally clubbed, arrested Attorney Connolly. Mr. Connolly says that he did so without justification, and it is likely that the matter will be brought to the attention of the Police Commission.

BREAKS AUTO RECORD.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Driver Resta broke the world's speed record for automobiles at Brooklands this afternoon by travelling fifty miles in 32 minutes 16 2-5 seconds.

SAYS MORMONS RULE BAY STATE

Charging that Massachusetts is under the domination of a Mormon king of Salt Lake City, and that the "all-powerful Senator" of this State would refuse to give a constituent the documents bearing on the Smoot case, if he were asked to do so, Former Senator Frank J. Cannon of Utah caused a sensation before a gathering of Boston ministers at an anti-Mormon meeting today in the Park Street Church.

Former Senator Cannon declared that a Boston girl was lured from a music school in this city to Utah and made the fourth wife of a prominent citizen of that State. Disgraced, he said, the girl has been ashamed to return to her home and her heart-broken mother.

Cries of Shame.

When the speaker charged that Massachusetts was "under the control of a Mormon king who has his throne in Salt Lake City," there were cries of "shame."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" continued the speaker. "I can tell you that we have right in this country a Mahommedan harem, and we want the political parties in this country to cease being connected with this Mormon kingdom.

"Now as Mitle as you may know it this Mormon king controls the legislation of Massachusetts, for when anything is wanted to be done against Mormonism, Senator Reed Smoot has control here. Suppose you wrote to your all-powerful friend of the State and asked for documents bearing upon the Smoot case in Congress, you would not get them. Your Senator would not dare to send them to you. You might get all the information you desired about the Lorimer case, but on the Smoot case silence is maintained. What are you going to do about it?

Boston Girl Lured Away.

"A Mormon elder comes here to Boston in the disguise of a musician, but gets close to a young woman attending a school in this city where music is taught. The family of this young lady are well known in Boston. That girl is inveigled away from her home, is baptized in that Mormon church and becomes the fourth wife of a well known man in Utah, a high priest of the Mormon church. The young girl found that she has disgraced herself by her action, and has broken her mother's heart and is ashamed to come back.

"Then take the financial interests of this country, for instance, the sugar trust, see how intimately they are connected, so that you see the presidents of these large concerns bowing before the Mormon king.

"What are you going to do about it?" Demand that the Mormon kingdom all over the United States be checked in its union with political parties; demand that the walls of this outlying small be closed to it; demand that Mormon elders shall not rose their money with our State legislature.

Mormon Head Has Five Wives.

"The present head of the Mormon Church has five wives. I know this. I have suffered for my knowledge. For twenty-two years I was with that organization and I want the people of the United States to see and to know the unspeakable harm and injury that is being done by this polygamous institution."

Mrs. George W. Coleman gave definite information about the ways and means that Mormons take in this city to get young girls to become the polygamous wives of rich Mormons.

STORM WRECKS BUILDINGS.

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn., Sept. 9.—A storm wrecked buildings and destroyed property valued at $100,000. At Fort Francis, Ont., lightning struck the office of the Fort Francis Times, setting it on fire and destroying it. Loss $25,000.

THRILLING RACE AGAINST DEATH

record time by wagon, train and boat, was a most thrilling one. Special trains running at a high rate of speed, were utilized.

The trip was begun at 3:15 a. m. Saturday. The last stage of the race was made yesterday afternoon.

But as the doctor was rushing through New England and nearing his destination Mrs. McLean was seized with a sinking spell. She was very low when Dr. Parker reached her side. He was unable to do anything for her.

No more exciting race with the hope of saving a human life was ever made in this country. Mr. McLean felt that if Dr. Barker could be reached and brought to the sick room, there was hope for the stricken woman.

The news that he was wanted reached Dr. Barker in the early morning of Saturday. He was asleep. Roused from his slumber he received the message of life and death. Used to such emergencies, hastened from the camp to the nearest railroad station—Lake Toxoway, forty miles away. The trip was made by automobile and wagon.

By Auto and Wagon.

Part of the road was so rough that an automobile could not be utilized.

The race, summarized, from the time he reached the railroad until he walked into the sick room at Bar Harbor, was as follows:

Special No. 1 (Second stage of journey)—Lake Toxaway, N. C., to Hendersonville, to Asheville, to Salisbury, to Washington, D. C. Distance, 545 miles. Left 7:15 a. m. Saturday. Arrived 1:30 a. m. Sunday.

Special No. 2 (Third stage of journey)—Washington to Pennsylvania Railroad Station, New York. Distance, 230 miles. Left 1:30 a. m. Sunday. Arrived 6:25 a. m. Sunday.

Special No. 3 (Fourth stage of journey)—New York, Grand Central Station, to Springfield, Worcester, Portland, Mount Desert Ferry and Bar Harbor (last eight miles by motor boat). Distance, 324 miles. Left 6:45 a. m. Sunday. Arrived 3:03 p. m. Sunday.

Total distance covered, 1,581 miles.

Total elapsed time, 40 hours 48 minutes.

Averaged 72 Miles an Hour.

The rail portion of the journey was made at an average of seventy-two miles an hour, and shattered all records for train speed along the Atlantic coast. It was such a journey as no physician ever had before. On the way Dr. Barker rode in three special trains, a mountain wagon, an automobile, a taxicab, a motor boat and a livery carriage.

The McLean family leased a special private wire and operator by the Postal line between Bar Harbor and Washington, which stood ready for messages night and day. The progress of the trains was flashed at brief intervals to Bar Harbor and to the anxiously waiting home.

M'NAMARA BETTER; MINUS APPENDIX

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., Sept. 9.—James B. McNamara, serving a life sentence for murder in connection with the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building, has been operated on at the prison hospital for appendicitis. He is in no danger and he will be sent out of the hospital in a few days.

CAPTAIN MAKES MUTINY CHARGE

A story of mutiny, shipwreck, desertion, violation of the custom laws and other experiences, such as are seldom recorded outside the realm of fiction, was told today by the captain and crew of the little auxiliary schooner Alert, which arrived at T wharf with twenty-six swordfish. Albert Malloch is the captain.

The schooner left about two weeks ago for a fishing trip off the Grand Banks. There evidently was bad blood between captain and crew. The trouble started a little over a week ago when the schooner ran into Louisburg, Cape Breton, for shelter and three of the crew deserted.

Wednesday last, the engine stalled and the boat went to Halifax for repairs. Thursday, while leaving Halifax harbor, the schooner ran ashore on Black Rock shoal. One of the crew was at the wheel. The captain says he believes he attempted to put the wheel hard aport and by so pull them off, but the crew refused to make fast a line, contending that this was extra work and they should be paid accordingly. This the captain asserts was nothing. The boat was not floated until Saturday night.

When the boat was outside the three-mile limit and the captain was again master, the men were ordered to obey orders or take a licking. And they believe he meant every word of it. Two men, who said they were sick, stayed in their bunks. But the rest poured a bucket of water on each and they were immediately.

Some of the swordfish on board, it was claimed by the crew, were bought from a number of vessels inside the three-mile limit, thus violating a customs rule. The crew also said they had been bought outside the limit. "Hungry" Foley, one of the crew, tipped off one of the customs officials, and as a result Captain Malloch had to visit the Custom House, make explanations and pay duties on the fish.

QUINCY MAYOR RAPS CLOSING OF SCHOOL

Mayor Stone of Quincy today issued a statement in which he says that the closing of the grammar school at Atlantic on last Friday was entirely uncalled for. According to the mayor, the school building is perfectly safe, and that the pupils have been in no danger. He bases his reply on the report of Commissioner of Public Works Fred E. Tupper, who reported the building safe and sound after the building was erected in 1907. Soon after its completion a defection in one of the supporting rods was discovered. This brought the weight of the roof on the other rod. This fact was the basis for the centre of the complainants' arguments. During the Summer vacation extensive repairs were made upon the school building. Additional weight was said to have been added to the roof.

SANDS SWALLOW PAWTUCKET MILL

PAWTUCKET, Sept. 9.—A two-story brick power house, the property of the Lonsdale Cotton Goods Manufacturing Company of Lonsdale, on the outskirts of Pawtucket, dropped into a hole, caused by quicksands shifting underneath the foundation, early today.

The building was drawn almost completely under by the sands.

There was no one in the building, but 450 mill workers have been thrown out of employment for at least two months as a result. It is said that the company was aware that quicksands were in the vicinity, but nothing serious, it was thought, would happen. The loss has been estimated at $100,000.

Story Time!

¶ Once upon a time we sent our buyers out into the Land of How and they made most wonderful discoveries!

Discoveries that mean a great deal to Mothers of New England who have to clothe Little Chaps properly.

These men discovered that Knickerbockers made out of three full yards of Cloth wear longer and fit better than the Short Measure kind.

They discovered that (in the Land of How) Mothers prefer to have many Styles to select from; that what suits one Child will not suit all.

And so our Discoverers came back out of the Land of How with many styles of Clothes for the Boy, all made Full Measure and of Honest Value, for the choosing of New England Mothers.

When the Mothers saw the Clothes they said, "These men must be know-how men, for they have succeeded in Finding what we have long sought in vain."

And so they came and Purchased and were Satisfied.

SPENCER BRAVE, CHEERS MOTHER

Bertram G. Spencer, the Springfield murderer, sentenced to die in the week beginning next Monday, was visited today in the Charlestown State Prison by his mother, this being her second visit since he was brought to the death cell from the Hampden County jail.

The unusually good spirits of Spencer in this crucial moment of his life has served to cheer his mother. She talked to the condemned young man for an hour and a half. He hopes that the Governor Council, at its meeting Wednesday, will save him from the electric chair.

Mrs. Spencer was taken into the death house by Deputy Warden Allen. When she was leaving the prison she made this statement:

"I found my son in the best of spirits. This is a great gratification to me. He is bearing up splendidly. If he showed any weakness I am afraid that I could not stand it.

"Instead of my visits cheering him it looks as though they were cheering me. His time does not pass heavily on his hands because he is busy reading and talking with the guard, the chaplain and others who visit him.

"Bert's appetite is good and he sleeps well. He is looking forward with great hope to the action of the Governor and Council. His wife will come to see him in a day or two."

Spencer is allowed to smoke and gets considerable comfort from that. He reads for the most part Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy's "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

AT FIRST SIGHT

By MORTON BIRGE

(Sir James Crichton Brown of London says love at first sight is "a psychological epoch, corresponding with the installation of new circuit in the brain."—News Note.)

All those who know their Laura Jean and Bertha N. recall
The reams and reams these writers write on love in ev'ry kind of light,
And now the one especial brand of love that, more than all,
Inspires these authors with romance is what they call "Love at first glance."

And now comes Sir James Crichton Browne, a noted London gent,
Who views through scientific eyes and then proceeds to analyse
Love at first sight, in language cold, and with plain intent
To show that Laura Jean and such have worked the heart throbs overmuch.

Will someone take this person, Browne, and hurl him far away?
Too much depends on sentiment to lose that "first glance" element.
Not only would the novelists have little left to say,
But think of plays and picture shows and vaudeville and goodness knows.

The daily papers couldn't print without this "first sight" stuff.
You know how those reporter guys tell how "he glanced into her eyes";
To get along without this brand of love would be too tough,
The simpler way would be to drown this sinful Sir James Crichton Browne.

MAKE NEW PLEA TO SAVE JORDAN

In an attempt to save the life of Chester B. Jordan, sentenced to die for the murder of his wife, in the week beginning September 22, effort will be made today before Governor Foss to induce him to allow alienists to examine the condemned man.

Either General Charles W. Bartlett or a lawyer from his office will appear before the Governor in behalf of Jordan. If alienists are selected, one of the features of the evidence that will be presented to them to show that Jordan was insane is that when he cut up the body of his wife instead of destroying the head he left that in the furnace of the home.

"Governor Foss, as everybody knows," said General Bartlett today, "is opposed to capital punishment. In order that Jordan may have a fair chance the Governor feels that he should be examined by alienists.

"If alienists are appointed to make the examination I think that it would only be fair that I should have the selection of one of them. I or one of the members of my office will see the Governor today and ascertain just what he proposes to do in the matter."

General Bartlett does not expect that Jordan's case will be presented to the Executive Council at the meeting on Wednesday, but that it will go over for a week. Should the matter of alienists be taken up—and General Bartlett said he would insist that Jordan be examined by them—it is probable that the condemned man will be granted a respite until his sanity is finally determined.

Jordan's relatives have been unremitting in their efforts in his behalf. He has been visited weekly in the Charlestown prison by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Phineas Jordan, and by his sister, Mrs. Frederick Kendall, and her husband. Jordan seems cheerful under the circumstances. He attended the chapel services yesterday, talked with his mother and father and had his usual walk in the prison yard.

BIG ATTENDANCE AT SOMERVILLE, EVERETT, MALDEN SCHOOLS

Schools opened today in Malden, Everett and Somerville, after the long Summer vacation, with increased attendance.

In Malden there was an enrolment of about 9,000 pupils, in Everett about 8,000.

In Everett the enrolment was the largest ever. In the Washington and Hale Schools it will be necessary to use the assembly halls as class rooms. In the first grades only half sessions can be held. In other schools storerooms and other small rooms were pressed into service. At the High School, even with the ninth grade pupils removed to elementary school buildings, the congestion was felt. The school was hampered also by failure to have the $18,000 manual training quarters ready.

Despite the increased attendance in Malden, there was plenty of room. There were 7,000 pupils in the public schools and 2,000 in the parochial. In the High School there are 1,100 pupils. Sub-Master Thornton Jenkins is acting master of the High School, Head Master Arthur Lee teaching in Germany this year.

Somerville schools opened today with an increased enrolment. Nearly 7,000 pupils reported for study in the High School.

Wiley Calls Martha Washington's Recipe for "Pears" Illegal

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 9.—"If Martha Washington were alive," said Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, "and insisted on using her recipe for putting up pears boiled in rye before putting them in brandy, she would become entangled with the pure food experts.

"Her recipe is an excellent one, but I think she took an undue risk in putting her fruit into rye. There was some possibility of poison getting into the pear if the skins were not promptly removed after immersion.

"The jar of her pears just discovered in the possession of Mr. Mossburg, at Washington, is, I think, immune from any danger, because of their immersion in brandy for so many years.

"Brandy and pears are good things and evidently President Washington liked them, judging from the rather elaborate recipe used in preserving them."

ROSE PITONOF TO TRY 20-MILE SWIM DOWN THE THAMES

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Because of continued bad weather and rough water, Miss Rose Pitonof, the young Boston swimmer, who came to England to try to swim the English channel, said today that she had decided to abandon the attempt.

However, being determined to set a new record for women while here, Miss Pitonof is planning to swim from Blackwall Pier to Gravesend tomorrow, over a twenty-mile course that will take her down the crowded Thames.

The American girl secured permission from the port authorities today. She says she will start at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon if the weather permits.

The Thames swim has never been made by a woman, although Monty Helbets and other famous swimmers have performed the difficult feat.

Winning Smile Counts Most

What Girls Need to Get Jobs

Miss Della Bean, Head of School of Salesmanship, Advises Those Seeking Positions.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

"The first and most important thing a girl looking for a position in a department store should possess is a winning smile and a pleasing manner," said Miss Della B. Bean, head of the unique institution, a school of salesmanship in one of Boston's largest and most progressive department stores.

"A girl must meet and please customers, and no matter how handsome a girl is or how neat, if she wears a frown and has a disagreeable manner she's not the girl we can put in a position to meet and please our customers. But no matter how plain a girl is, if she has a winning smile and an obliging manner she's the girl instantly shown the preference."

Miss Bean, through her wide experience, first as a buyer and now at the head of the salesmanship school, has had ample opportunity to observe.

"In selecting people for positions we all must realize that we should not form our opinions too quickly. We often make mistakes, and that is one thing we should try to avoid. In looking for the right people to fill our positions we look for the girl with intelligence, tact. There are several requirements for the successful business woman. First the pleasing smile and pleasing manner, then neatness, tact, intelligence, industry and courtesy. In a department store there is little that counts more than courtesy, though neatness and all the other things mentioned count seriously for or against.

Grammar School Girls Best.

"We often find that the grammar school girls are the best for us, as they are keener on the things of importance to us—that is, arithmetic, spelling and writing. The average college girl who applies for a position in a department store is at a great disadvantage compared with the grammar school girl. The college girl's mind has been trained along other lines than commercial. She has forgotten her arithmetic and spelling and become careless in her handwriting, while in the mind of the grammar school girl these are all fresh. Even the high school girl does not compare favorably with the grammar school girl in these things.

"In our school of salesmanship we teach the girls just how to approach a customer, how to handle and talk of the goods she is to sell, and also of the various different types of customers and just how to treat them. How to make out sales slips and various other things are also taught. In addition to the course on sales slips and store system, more advanced subjects in salesmanship have been treated, such as lectures on textiles, taking up merchandise, etc. By selected demonstration sales the pupils have been given an excellent opportunity to put into actual practice the instruction received in the classes and to increase the value of the lectures by helpful criticism of one another's work. An especially valuable feature is the course of lectures by buyers—experts in their particular lines—who have given to the sales people the benefit of their long experience and technical skill."

"What would be your advise to the average girl starting out to look for a position in a department store?" I questioned this brown-eyed lady whose whole face gleams with intelligence.

Winning Manner Counts.

"It would be, first of all, to cultivate a winning manner—to learn to smile and then to apply herself heart and soul to the work she has at hand.

"Neatness, of course, is necessary, but I find that that can be acquired more quickly than any of the others. We have little trouble in teaching girls to be neat because it takes them but a short time to realize that that is most important thing and easily acquired. Every girl must be tactful. No matter how bright or clever she is, if she lacks tact success will be hard to attain. She must at all times be courteous, in that way she wins the good will of the customer and will be the better able to do business with her than she otherwise would.

As to Rats and Puffs.

"We try to teach our girls that they must be just as courteous when 5 o'clock of a hot afternoon comes as they are in the morning. It's harder to remember then and that is why we have to try so hard to impress them with the importance. Just as good a customer will come at 5 o'clock as would come earlier in the day and the same treatment must be accorded her then as earlier."

"Do you have any particular style of dress; must the girls abandon rats and puffs?" I asked.

"In the Winter time the girls all dress in black. We have no rule saying that they must not wear rats and puffs, but we talk to them on the unsuitability of such things, and then if a girl is seen to come to work with a terrific weight of extra hair on her head she is called to the welfare workers' office and spoken to kindly and advised. In the Summer white waists with moderately low necks are allowed, but this has to be watched, as the girls sometimes will come in with waists decidedly low and sleeves decidedly short. So we have arranged that only three-quarter or full length sleeves be worn in the Summer time, and just a slightly low neck."

Malden Girl to Be Doctor's Bride in Hospital Romance

A romance of the Malden Hospital will culminate the 16th of this month, when Dr. Charles F. Bean of Medford will take for his bride Miss Amy Ryder of Malden, whom he first met when he treated her for appendicitis while he was house physician at the Malden Hospital. More than 1,000 invitations have been sent out for the wedding, which will take place at the First Universalist Church.

From the time he treated her at the hospital Dr. Bean continued his acquaintance with Miss Ryder, and was soon paying active court to her. After the wedding Dr. Bean and his wife will go abroad, where Dr. Bean plans to study for three years before returning to Medford to take up his practice.

Following the wedding ceremony there will be a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Ryder, No. 67 La Grange street, Malden.

Dr. Bean is a graduate of Tufts Medical School. His father and several other relatives are also medical men.

MODEL BREWERY AT BREWERS' CONGRESS HERE NEXT WEEK

Educational and social features will form important parts of the fifty-second annual gathering of the United States Brewers' Association, to be held in Boston September 18, 19, and 20. This will be the first gathering of the kind held in Boston in twenty years. There is to be an elaborate exhibit, free to the public, of brewing machinery and operations, brewing materials and brewing products. This will be given under the auspices of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in the Henry L. Pierce building of the Institute, at No. 50 Trinity place.

The most notable feature will be a miniature brewery and bottlery in full operation. This model "plant" occupies a space twenty feet long, eight feet wide and ten feet high, and is equipped throughout with modern brewing machinery and utensils on a corresponding diminutive scale. Demonstrations will be given under the direction of Dr. J. Lainson Wills, formerly of the National Brewing Academy, New York.

TO PROVE BRIGHT'S DISEASE CURABLE

You will agree that the following presents an incurable case so far as Digitalis, Nitro Glycerine, Strychnine, Mixture, etc., are concerned:

Chronic Bright's Disease of the kidneys, patient in convulsions nearly every day for three weeks, twenty pounds of the patient's weight being dropsy.

Patient—W. E. Strickland, 45 Verona place, San Francisco.

Patient's physician, Dr. Kelley, told him there was no hope.

E. F. Baldwin, President of the Ferry Drug Store, No. 20 Market Street, was instrumental in having Fulton's Renal Compound put to the test in this case. There was gradual improvement and final recovery. That it was complete may be known from the fact that this was about seven years ago and he was well at last advices a few months ago.

The substance of the formula surrounds each bottle.

Hiker-Jaynes Drug Stores will fill prescriptions and supply pamphlets.

Fall Millinery Opening

The New Fall Millinery Fashions now hold court in our Second Floor Milli- nery Parlors—a time when we will in- troduce to Fashion-followers all those decidedly new and clever creations that depict the very latest Paris thought in smart, distinctive Fall Millinery.

In Our Untrimmed Hat Sections We Show All the New Fall Shapes

The two expositions combined afford an excellent opportunity to milliners, out- of-town merchants and exclusive dress- ers to obtain authentic style information, as expressed by the foremost milliners of Paris.

We send our own representatives to Europe, where they have access to the most exclusive shops. We import our own models, shapes and trimmings, and all of our copies, adaptations and modifi- cations come from our own workrooms here or in our New York Simpson-Craw- ford Store, under the direction of a corps of master milliners.

We have commercialized the mil- liner's art and removed the high-price barrier on Paris millinery.

MANY CHANGES IN HUB SCHOOLS

Boston's school children will find, when they take up their studies again on Wednes- day morning, that the city has spent thou- sands of dollars in new buildings and in renovating and remodelling old ones.

All but one of the twenty schools in the South End District will be ready on Wednesday when the pupils come trooping back to their studies. The exception is the Prince School, where the addition of another story, to include four new class- rooms, is as yet unfinished. A new brick annex, which will be used as an assembly hall, is being constructed on the south side of the main building, and these reno- vations will not be completed until the latter part of October. It is believed that this school will be occupied for the greater part by pupils within a few weeks.

At the Franklin School on Waltham street, a new system of heating and ven- tilation has been installed. The Quincy School on Tyler street has also undergone extensive repairs, chief among the improve- ments there being a new addition on the north side of the building facing Tyler street. This will give the school two more classrooms. The addition will not be ready for occupancy at least. On the Hudson street side of the building the high brick wall has been torn down, as have a number of old wooden buildings there, giving more light and air.

Seat for Each Pupil.

It is expected by Headmaster Charles M. Clay of the Roxbury High School that the new building will be finished by the first of next month. In the meantime those pupils who cannot be accommodated in the classrooms will meet in the school hall. There will probably be about 950 pupils and of this number there will be less than twenty-five boys.

Headmaster Charles F. King of the Dearborn district does not anticipate any crowding. There are more than 2,000 children in this district and half of that number attend school in the twenty-one classrooms of the Dearborn School.

George F. Murphy, headmaster of the Hugh O'Brien district, looks forward to seeing that every pupil has a seat and desk before the first two days of the school term have passed. This is one of the largest school districts in the city.

East Boston starts the school year with two new structures, the Commodore Barry in the first section district, and the U. S. Grant School on Paris street, in the third section. The latter was only opened a short time previous to the be- ginning of the recent Summer vacation, and the Commodore Barry School was also opened during the last school year. Al- though the population of East Boston is increasing very fast, it is expected there will be plenty of room for all children.

Assistant Superintendent J. E. Burke of Dorchester feels confident that the old buildings, together with several new ones, will be found to take care of the children in his district.

The Bradford School on Willowwood street and the Beaumont Street School have been added during the Summer. The pupils in the Laurist avenue and Ashmont sections, who have been compelled to travel some distance to school, will be benefited by the two new buildings.

Expect Largest Class.

The schoolmasters in the Brighton dis- trict predict an unusually large registra- tion. They believe, however, that there will be ample accommodations for all.

It is expected the entering class at the Brighton High School will be the largest in the history of that school. Additions to the present building are soon to be made, including an assembly hall, a mod- ern gymnasium and more class rooms.

The school year in the West Roxbury High School will open with the addition of a manual training department in charge of Charles H. V. Morse.

The old building in Germantown which has been used as a schoolhouse for more than fifty years has been moved to a more con- venient location, entirely renovated and connected with a new building of the same size with a wing, providing four large class rooms, and two teachers' and nurses' rooms, and two well-ventilated basements.

Joshua Q. Litchfield assumes the head of the Agassiz School, Jamaica Plain, with the opening of the school year, taking the place of John T. Gibson, who had been for more than forty years the headmaster of the school.

NO CLEMENCY FOR M'NAMARA BROTHERS

GRAND RAPIDS, Sept. 9.—Governor Hiram W. Johnson of California, Progres- sive party candidate for Vice-President, denied all knowledge of a petition being circulated in Los Angeles for pardons for the McNamara brothers, dynamiters. He also denied that he had promised clem- ency.

SEAS AGAIN BLOCK ROSE PITONOF'S SWIM

DOVER, Eng., Sept. 9.—Rose Pitonof of Boston again was prevented from mak- ing an attempt to swim the English Chan- nel, owing to the heavy sea caused by a high westerly wind. Miss Pitonof has waited here two months for favorable conditions.

SEE PERIL TO CUSTOM HOUSE

Will the new custom house tower be built without causing the old building from which it is to be projected to topple over? There are architects in Boston who are willing to wager it won't.

Merchants doing business in the vicinity are giving the old building a wide berth. A well known architect who was ap- proached by the Boston AMERICAN and asked if there was any real danger re- plied:

"I think all possible precautions have been taken by the contractors to prevent the old building from collapsing. They have shored it up on the outside and strengthened its former insufficient foun- dations. I think the building will stand all right, but if you pull it right up to me I won't deny there is a chance that it might collapse. Buildings that caused very much more secure than this one have flopped."

See Danger of Toppling.

The AMERICAN is in receipt of several letters from business men located near the old custom house declaring that the building has recently settled so that it is in more danger of toppling over than ever. On the west and south side of the building this shifting or settling can be plainly seen.

The following letter was received from Mr. J. B. Dagnino, of the firm of J. B. Dagnino & Co., importers, at No. 262-264 Commercial street.

Editor of AMERICAN:

Beg to call your attention to the danger that increases the people of this city by the displacement of about two inches of the massive wall standing above the big granite columns, external side, of the remaining old Custom House building on State street, foot of Commercial, and also India street. The posting or shifting is going on from west to northeast, and can easily be noticed by anyone who will look at the pillars or columns at the top. Part of said massive wall is no longer supported as it should be, by the heavy columns, but is instead resting dangerously on some of the timber supports placed and roped to- gether with the colossal bases of the said Custom House building. Through your paper you may give due warning and to avoid catastrophies.

Respectfully yours,
J. B. DAGNINO.

In reply to Mr. Dagnino's criticism the engineer for Norcross Brothers, the con- tractors who are reconstructing the build- ing, said:

"Safe," Says Engineer.

"The building is absolutely safe. It will stand in its present condition until that fabled time when the services of some suc- cessor to Peary and Amundsen will be re- quired to approach the highest regions of the air which we now have any record. The shor- ing could all be removed and the wings would still stand, although there might be some drainage to the big stone facings through cracking.

"When the building was erected some seventy years ago it was built upon in- sufficient foundations and has been settling to ever since. Recent borings made bear this out.

"The building rested on a five-foot masonry platform, built on short piles driven from five to eight feet through soft and sandy soil to about two feet into the blue clay bottom.

"When Norcross Brothers undertook to sink solid foundations for the 500-foot tower in the centre they had to break through the masonry platform and their leaders found one homogeneous mass the foundations became five in num- ber, three running north and south and the north and south wings and east and west portions standing on separate platforms.

No Permanent Harm Done.

"The wings then settled to such an ex- tent that they took on their present dilapi- dated appearance. No lasting harm has been done, however, and whatever damage has occurred will be repaired. It will re- quire two years to complete the work, but when that time has passed the wings will look like new and the tower—which rests upon bedrock one hundred feet below the street, will soar hundreds of feet above the rest of Boston and be the dominant feature of the skyline of the city."

"SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR INDIGESTION, BILIOUSNESS AND CONSTIPATION

Better than castor oil, calomel or cathartics to cleanse your stomach, liver and 30 feet of bowels. Harmless laxative for men, women and children.

Primitive folks did not need laxa- tives. They lived outdoors, ate plenty of fruit, and all of their food was coarse. We modern people are dif- ferent. We exercise too little, eat little fruit, and our food is too fine—too rich.

We simply can't have our ten yards of bowels digged up. Liver choked with sour bile and stomach full of foul effete matter and feel well. It means that the food and waste retained in the stomach and thirty feet of bowels ferments—decays. The decay creates poisons, gases and acids, and these poisons are sucked into the blood through the very ducts intended to suck in the nutriment. Then we have sick headache, become dull, bilious, tongue coated, nervous, meals don't digest, and we feel miserable all over.

So we must make our choice. We must live like primitive folks, else we must take artificial means to move the excess bile and waste matter on and out of the system.

The safest, most harmless and effec- tive stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator for men, women and children—is delicious Syrup of Figs, which doesn't irritate, gripe or weaken. Its effect is the effect of fruits. It is composed entirely of lax- ative figs, senna and aromatics. Don't think you are drugging yourself. Syrup of Figs can be constantly used without harm.

Ask your druggist for "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," and see on the label that it is prepared by The California Fig Syrup Company. This is the only genuine—the old reliable. Refuse, with contempt, the so-called Fig Syrup imitations sometimes offer- ed to deceive you.

WILSON POINTS TARIFF LESSON

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—This was a busy day for Governor Woodrow Wilson. The Democratic presidential nominee attended a pure food conference at the Colony Club, the most exclusive women's organization in New York, where he delivered a speech promising to make pure food a live campaign issue; opened the Democratic tariff exhibit at No. 10 Union square with a speech on the tariff; delivered another address on the same subject in the open air in Union square, and then conferred with a number of national leaders at national headquarters upon his future speaking schedule.

At the tariff exhibit, Governor Wilson advanced the new thought that American manufacturers, in demanding a high tariff barrier for their own protection, are really taxing themselves. This puts United States industries at a disadvantage in trying to compete in the world's markets, he said;

"We are pampering our industries," said the presidential nominee, "and we are pampering them at the very time they should be getting free. American industry is now in a straightjacket and what we are fighting for in behalf of industry is freedom."

"It is mortifying," Governor Wilson said, "that a tariff exhibit should be necessary. Such an object lesson," the speaker declared, "is like sending grown-ups back to the kindergarten."

The Governor continued his attack by saying that the manufacturers were really robbing themselves. He pointed out that a sewing machine may be purchased in Mexico for $18 that costs $30 here.

"How much greater," he cried, "would the market for these machines be if they were sold for $18 here as well as in Mexico."

The Governor spoke along the same lines in his open air address. Altogether about 5,000 persons heard him.

At the pure food conference the Governor created a wave of enthusiasm by promising to say something on the subject in all his campaign speeches hereafter.

"We must conserve the public health," declared the Governor, and he said he would make this a party slogan. Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the former government pure food expert, sent a telegram, saying that the movement will have his entire sympathy and support.

Among those present at the conference in addition to Governor Wilson were Professor Irving Fisher of Yale; Dr. Woods Hutchinson, of New York; Dr. J. M. McCormick, of Kentucky, Dr. Thomas Darlington, of Chicago; Dr. A. C. Newton, of New Jersey; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, the society leader, and many others.

Upon his return to headquarters, Governor Wilson went into conference with Vice Chairman William G. McAdoo of the National Committee, Congressman Burleson, of Texas, Senator Gore, of Oklahoma; Senator O'Gorman, of New York; Senator-elect Ollie James, of Kentucky; Congressman Redfield, of Brooklyn; Josephus Daniels and others.

Although no official statement was issued after the conference it was understood that the leaders are in favor of extending the Governor's Western speech-making schedule.

ELECTRIC SHOW OPENS SEPT. 28

Boston's big annual electric show opens in Mechanics Building on Saturday evening, September 28. It will continue during all October.

The plan for the show include many features never before undertaken for any exposition in New England. Huntington avenue from Copley square to Massachusetts avenue will be ablaze with great rainbow colored lights lining each side of the thoroughfare.

Forty thousand lamps in many colors will be used on Mechanics Building, and 212 flame arc lamps of 2,500 candle power each will light the avenue.

The work on the outside of Mechanics Building will be finished this week. The outlines of every window in the great structure, which by the way is said to be the largest of the kind in the world, will be marked with colored electric lights of 20 candle power each.

The same outlining will also mark the building lines, bringing out the corners, angles and lines of the roof, while the familiar tower will be an almost solid mass of electric lamps. Over the main entrances to the building will be seen beautiful designs in mosaic patterns.

STRAUS RESIGNS AND LATER RECONSIDERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Oscar S. Straus, chairman of the arbitration board trying to adjust the wage dispute between fifty Eastern railroads and their engineers, resigned today when the board met. Mr. Straus took his action because he has been nominated for Governor of New York on the Progressive ticket. The other members of the board of arbitration agreed that the nomination of Mr. Straus would have no bearing upon his position as a member of the board and asked him to withdraw his resignation. He did so.

PUT COAL SHORTAGE AT 8,000,000 TONS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9.—Officials of the big coal companies say that many of the miners who stopped work on April 1 have not returned to their places and that because of the lack of labor anthracite production will fall short about five million tons. This, together with the shortage caused by the two and a half months' cessation of work, brings the year's shortage to 8,000,000 tons.

COLONEL AGAIN AFTER WILSON

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 9.—Sharp reply to Governor Wilson for his recent criticism of the Progressive platform's advocacy of a federal law for a minimum wage scale was made by Colonel Roosevelt today in a speech here. The ex-President stoutly defended his argument that the government could legally take the corporations under control in regulating the hours of employment and fixing the lowest wage.

The Colonel declared that Governor Wilson's insistency that such a scheme could not be put into effect is "folly." He pointed out that the government had brought the corporations to bay through the interstate commerce law, in exercising supervision in various ways that worked a distinct advantage to the public. "It is nonsense that the hours of employment of women and lowest wages they are to get cannot be regulated in the same way," declared the Colonel.

Working Women's Perils.

The reply to Wilson was made at a mass meeting during the morning. Roosevelt made the point that if Wilson's argument is to hold, then it must be conceded that the Interstate Commerce Commission has been a failure.

"I don't believe any one doubts the real value of that commission," he added. "Through the commission the government has put into effect some substantial reforms. It can, by exercising that same power, bring about better working conditions for women."

The Colonel went on to point out the dangers confronting underpaid working women.

"If we don't grapple with this problem," he said, "we will be responsible for keeping in effect a system that for the moral side is extremely hasardous to the working girl.

Urges Woman Suffrage.

"Danger lurks for the underpaid working woman. We owe it as a social obligation to make her position in life better for her." Later the Colonel explained the reasons why he is out squarely for woman suffrage.

"Not because wealthy women had interested themselves in it; but because I found that the earnest, hard working women were gravely interested in woman suffrage, did I take it up," said the Colonel. "I was surprised, as I came to study it, to find that a strong sentiment existed all over the country for the movement. I am for woman suffrage heart and soul."

Roosevelt was heartily acclaimed at both meetings, in keeping with the welcome extended upon his arrival last night. The people of Spokane turned out in immense numbers to see him as he left his hotel today for his automobile parade. He was escorted by 500 Bull Moosers, each wearing a bandanna.

EXHUME BODY OF COUNTESS

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Sept. 9.—The body of Countess Rosa Menschik Szabo was exhumed at New York Bay Cemetery this afternoon in an effort to establish definitely the cause of her death.

Present were a representative of the Austro-Hungary government, officials of Orange County, N. Y., where the countess was drowned in Greenwood Lake while boating with her lawyer, Burton W. Gibson, and several detectives.

After the examination, which was carried out upon an order issued by Judge Blair of the Court of Common Pleas, the body was taken to Hughes' morgue in this city for an autopsy.

An arrest in the Countess Szabo will mystery may be expected within forty-eight hours, according to detectives.

Adolph Rist, the Pinkerton detective who has been conducting the investigation, declared at Greenwood Lake that he had found the stenographer who wrote Mrs. Szabo's will, as well as the woman who after the Austrian woman's death by drowning posed as her mother.

Important as any witness who will be called in the case is Mrs. Louise Marot, who was a neighbor of Mrs. Szabo in the apartment house at No. 46 West Sixty-fourth street.

She said:

"On the morning that Mrs. Szabo, or Ritter, as we knew her, left here for the last time—it was a Tuesday—she said to me:

"'I am going boating. I'll be back this evening if he doesn't turn the trick today. He tried last Sunday, and he might try again.'

"She laughed nervously when she said this, and I understood that she was referring to the boating accident of the previous Sunday. She never came back."

Romance of Soldier's Bride Helped Him to Commission

MRS. FRANK McCABE AND HER BABY

This is about a Boston school teacher girl, according to all the army fiction, but who married a dashing American soldier and went off to the Philippines with him and now has come home on a visit. It is a romance, and people who think romance is dead would better turn over to the financial page right away.

Mrs. Lieutenant Frank McCabe is visiting relatives at No. 20 Fenno street, Roxbury. That's all the social note says, but it epitomizes a charming little love story.

Mrs. McCabe was Miss Anna Murray, a graduate of the Boston Normal School, class of 1904, and who taught for several years at the Lewis School, Roxbury.

Frank McCabe was a Boston boy who enlisted in the United States army just after the Spanish war, and went out to the Philippines to help quell the insurrection. Before he went to the war, Mr. McCabe and Miss Murray had been sweethearts, but both were too young to marry.

Some four years ago McCabe returned on leave. He had re-enlisted in the army and been promoted for gallantry and faithful service to a sergeancy. He renewed acquaintances with Miss Murray and finally they decided to marry.

All Miss Murray's friends were surprised when they learned she was going to marry a non-commissioned officer, and some of them predicted an unhappy ending to the romance. She paid no attention to would-be advisers and three years ago they were married in Roxbury by Bishop Anderson and departed happily for the West. Sergeant McCabe was then in the Fourteenth Cavalry.

Later their Boston friends heard that the regiment has been ordered to the Philippines and then there was silence.

Being the wife of a non-commissioned officer in the Philippines is not supposed to be a pleasant life for a delicately nutured evidently the McCabes found it satisfactory, and for more than two years they lived at an army post about 60 miles from Manila.

Getting to be a commissioned officer from the ranks is a difficult thing. There is an examination that would stagger a college graduate, and few enlisted men are college graduates. Alone, Sergeant McCabe would have found it well-nigh impossible, but with a wife who had gone through normal school, and who had the higher mathematics at her fingers' end, it was possible to realize his ambition.

AMERICAN GIVES AWAY $40,000

Who wants $10,000 in cash?
Who wants $1,000 in cash?

There is one package in the AMERICAN office containing $10,000, and there are five packages in the AMERICAN office containing $1,000 apiece, and all of them will be paid over to men or women in New England who do a little pleasant work for the Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

On another page you will find the plan explained in great detail. The Sunday AMERICAN wants a circulation of 500,000. It already has the largest circulation of any Sunday newspaper in New England.

To achieve this subscription list of 500,000, and to do it speedily, the Sunday AMERICAN must have the assistance of its readers.

Hence this prize of $10,000 to the man or woman who turns in the largest list—measured by subscription months rather than by individual subscribers—and hence five prizes of $1,000 each to each of the leaders in the five New England districts.

The proposition is a simple one. You work for the Sunday AMERICAN'S 500,000 Club and the Sunday AMERICAN pays you well for your efforts.

Of course the cash prizes are wonderful, and quite without precedent, but they are genuine. There is no string on them.

What COULDN'T you do with $10,000?

How often you have wished for such a sum!

How often have you planned, "I shall save five dollars every week, and in ten years, at compound interest, I shall have——"

And you haven't followed your plan at all! There was that vacation, and that spell of sickness, and the death of a loved one, perhaps, everything happened to interfere with your splendid plan and break in on your savings.

Well, cheer up! The best times are yet to come!

Win this $10,000! It belongs to you—to YOU, son; to YOU, sir; to YOU, madam. Come after it. The Sunday AMERICAN will not keep it. It is as good as gone from the Sunday AMERICAN now. It belongs in some reader of this newspaper, that reader who will go out and win it by inducing others to read the Sunday AMERICAN.

A subscription of three months means 1,500 votes for you; twelve months, 3,500 votes; thirty-six months, 7,500 votes. And so on.

So much for the cash prizes.

There are other prizes.

Altogether the awards number 1,501; three hundred for each of the five New England districts and the one grand prize of $10,000.

CROWLEY SENDS OUT CHALLENGE TO RIVAL

Daniel N. Crowley of Danvers, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Sixth District against State Senator George A. Schofield, is out today in a challenge to meet the Senator on the stump any time before the primaries. Crowley denies that he voted for Taft in 1908, and denies also that he is opposing Schofield in the interests of Congressman Gardner. Senator Schofield has made both accusations against Crowley.

GAYNOR SNUBS GRAFT PROBERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Warfare broke out today between Mayor Gaynor and Chairman Henry M. Curran of the Aldermanic graft investigating committee. Mr. Curran, with Emory R. Buckner, attorney for the committee, called at the Mayor's office to ask him if he cared to take an oath before testifying in the probe this afternoon. Robert Adamson, the Mayor's secretary, met them.

After being told of the purpose of the visit, Mr. Adamson went in to see the Mayor. Mr. Curran and Mr. Buckner waited nearly two hours. Then Mr. Adamson came out and said:

"I am sorry, but I have been instructed by the Mayor to say that he does not want to have anything to do with Mr. Curran.

"Mayor Gaynor believes that Mr. Curran has violated a confidence. He has sent word that he will see Mr. Buckner, but not Mr. Curran."

After this snub had been administered Mr. Curran said:

"I suppose that what the Mayor meant by saying I had violated a confidence was that I told the public what he said when Alderman Ralph Folks and myself called on him and asked him to issue a call for the special meeting of the Board of Aldermen which appointed the investigating committee. When I spoke to the Mayor about issuing a call he said we were trying to embarrass him and that if we undertook an investigation we would be stultifying ourselves. I told the reporters of this because I thought the public was entitled to know what the chief executive of the city of New York thought of a matter so important."

The graft investigating committee met in the aldermanic chamber this afternoon. The Mayor was scheduled to be the first witness.

H. J. SWANK GOT MISS AD TAKER

Henry J. Swank of No. 55 Highland street, Worcester, found Miss Ad Taker at the White City on Sunday and received from her an order for $100.

The White City, the greatest Summer resort of the central part of Massachusetts, was thronged with one of the largest crowds in its history all Sunday afternoon with people carrying the Boston Sunday AMERICAN. And they were all looking for Miss Ad Taker.

Everyone with a green parasol was met at every turn with the words, "You are Miss Ad Taker of the Boston AMERICAN," but it remained for Mr. Swank to pick out the right girl with the green parasol and receive the $100 order. Mr. Swank said:

"I just didn't let any chances get by me. My wife and I arrived in the park early and made a thorough job of it.

"I knew that the Boston AMERICAN would adopt some novel plan. I proceeded to hold up every woman with a green parasol. Then I held them up again, lest I had spoken the words wrongly.

"I saw Miss Ad Taker twice, and on the second round I said to myself: 'That's the girl.' She had the parasol hidden, or her escort had it under his coat. They will flash it in a minute from somewhere,' I thought.

"She looked like the pictures I had seen of Miss Ad Taker at Revere.

"Well, my wife and I corralled her and we put the question and she was the girl and we got the order for the AMERICAN $100.

"I am an engraver. My wife and little boy complete the family. This will buy shoes for the youngster and come in handy to my wife and myself in the coming weeks."

RED SOX RILEY'S COLUMN PILGRIMS

THIS is an off day for the Red Sox, who arrive at Chicago this afternoon to begin their last western campaign of thirteen games. If the Athletics win every game hereafter the Red Sox will have won the pennant when they have taken eleven more games. Under these circumstances the Sox might be expected to take possession of the bunting in the next and last home series—which will be with the Yankees at Fenway Park, September 24, 25 and 26. For, based upon the way they have been travelling lately, it is fair to presume that they will take all but one game of each of the four series on the road, which would give them nine victories and four defeats on this trip. But, since it is inconceivable that the Athletics will win all the games they have to play hereafter, it is probable that the Red Sox will make the triumph officially complete while in Cleveland or Detroit.

* * *

A bit of dissension crept into the peerless trio that cares for the outer gardens of the Sox, last week. Speaker and Lewis are the belligerents. "Spoke" would cover all three gardens, besides encroaching on the second baseman and shortstop, if he could.

He runs wild over towards right field, but since he plays closer in left for many of the batters and behind some of the pitchers than he used to do, he has encroached well into "Duffy" Lewis' territory. "Duffy" does not like it, so rows are occasional.

* * *

IN the great Wood-Johnson pitching duel, Speaker almost crashed into Lewis in a rush for a left field fly ball, but "Duffy," who was closer to it than "Spoke" insisted on taking the ball. "Spoke" looked at Lewis ferociously. Saturday a ball was sent up in almost the same place, but a bit nearer the infield, so Shortstop Krug also got into the rush for it. This time, all three runners stopped and let the ball drop ten feet from each of them, when it should have been an easy out. The misplay tied the score for Washington. Had Wagner been on the field, he would have assigned the fly either to Speaker, Lewis or himself, but Krug could not take such authority. Neither Wagner nor Hinhi was in the game. In such a case, Speaker is acting captain of that section of the field and Bill Carrigan manages the work closer to the plate. After the ball dropped, Speaker "bawled out" Lewis.

* * *

"SPOKE" has never imitated Ty Cobb to the extent of taking possession of the game and bossing his teammates and when he has words with any of his fellow-players it has been only a bit of a temper, due to seriousness. The Red Sox are remarkably free of quarreling with in the team, so nobody worries when any of them loses his temper. The second party to the incident usually laughs and in ten minutes it's all over.

* * *

CONNIE MACK says that the Red Sox is one of the best teams that ever played baseball, and Clark Griffith, through the AMERICAN, has endorsed what Mack said, adding that the Sox should beat the Giants in four of the first five games of the world's series, ending the contest then and there. Of course, it goes without saying that, by these statements—Mack's in last Thursday's AMERICAN, and Griffith's in the Sunday AMERICAN—the managers of the two runners-up in the American League have at last conceded the pennant to Boston.

* * *

TY COBB, who is one of the organizers of the new baseball protective association, has begun business for himself by asking for a salary of $15,000. He new association, of course, is not involved. If Cobb were paid that sum it would mean more than $100 for every game he plays. Since several of the pitchers receive that amount or a larger sum for every game they appear in, Cobb's demand does not seem unreasonable, looking at if from the matter of attendance that he draws to the ball games. Cobb's name, from a press agent's point of view, is worth many times $100 a game in the box office. If the Detroit team played exactly as well without Cobb as it does with him, the attendance would still be very much smaller than it is with Cobb in the game.

* * *

OF course, baseball capitalists would argue the sophistry that it was the enterprise and investment of the Detroit team owners which gave Cobb the opportunity to make the name and become famous as the greatest of all ball players. Also that that enterprise and investment give him a chance to play. This is true only in a very small degree. They sought Cobb. Cobb did not seek them. He launched himself, played the game himself, made himself, and the newspapers, always prompt to make a hero of a hero, did the rest.

* * *

NO. Cobb is worth fully $15,000 a year to the Tigers, and they'll profit by the transaction if he gets the money. But for the system of baseball contracts, which give Cobb the alternative of playing at Detroit or not playing at all, Ty would probably be paid much more than $15,000. Of course, it is common knowledge that Cobb is now on the pay roll at $10,000 a year, but he receives much more than that through the use of his name for numerous business purposes.

* * *

SPEAKING of salaries, reminds us that nearly all of the Red Sox will probably demand larger salaries next year. The pay of most of them was increased at the beginning of this season. Many of them will receive the additional money demanded next year, which is one of the penalties which the Sox magnates must pay for having a pennant winner.

Prince Henry to Lead Sonder Racing Fleet

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—Prince Henry of Prussia has taken the initiative in regard to German participation in the German-American sonder class yacht races, which were won by the American boats at Kiel last year and which are to be repeated at Marblehead in 1913.

At a meeting of yachtsmen called by him, steps to bring out a large field of German challengers were taken.

The dasirability of sending over three types of boat, one for light winds, one for moderate breezes and one for heavy weather, was recognized and yachtsmen planning to order new yachts for the international struggle were asked to consult with the sonder class committee of the Imperial Yacht Club, so that the new craft should be divided as evenly as possible among the three classes.

FRENCH CYCLIST WINS.

LEMANS, France, Sept. 9.—Devaz, a French rider, won the international motorcycle race held under the auspices of the Automobile Club of Sarthe. The distance was 396 kilometers (246 miles), which Devaz covered in 5 hours 12 minutes 33 seconds, about forty-eight miles an hour.

Strong Hearts Only On Malden Teams

Malden High athletes hereafter must be real athletes or they will be sent to the scrap heap. They must have sound muscles, strong hearts and must be able to holler. For the Malden school committee has decided that no pupil who has a weak constitution and to whom the baseball or gridiron battles will prove a strain shall be eligible to take part in athletics.

Ralph Good of Colby University will have charge of athletics succeeding Coach Charles F. Cuddy and he will get the football squad out at practice by the first of next week.

Schulte Suspended; Packs Grip and Quits

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 9.—Frank Schulte, star outfielder and home run hitter of the Chicago Cubs, has packed his baseball suit in moth balls and put his hat on the top shelf of the closet for the rest of the season.

He has been suspended without pay for the rest of the season. The action was taken by Manager Frank Chance because Schulte failed to abide by the anti-liquor rule of the club.

VOTE CONTEST ON LAST LAP

As announced in yesterday's Sunday AMERICAN, the last vote coupon in the World's Series Contest will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN September 29th.

The Red Sox will be on the home stretch simultaneously with the contest candidates. The interest in the contest battle is just as acute as that in the pennant-winning team's struggle.

It's a test of endurance, energy and fighting blood.

One thing is certain: the winners will be the envied of all New England fans when the race is over.

So, steam up, candidates; you are almost under the wire.

Another vote that will be published shortly, so be on the watch and don't miss it when it comes.

RITCHIE-MANDOT MATCHED.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 9.—Joe Mandot and Willie Ritchie were matched today for a ten-round bout in New Orleans some time during the month of October. The exact date has not yet been fixed.

Mr. Monday Morning!

Filene's

¶ The camera has caught you as you round Cape Weekend and hit the narrows for Home.

¶ Great old town, Boston!

¶ Good to get away from, sometimes, when a fellow feels like making Man-Friday tracks on the wet sands of Nowhere-in-Particular.

¶ But a better place to come back to!

¶ Well, we are glad you are in our midst once more, Mr. Monday Morning, for we have things to show you. Things we could not show you in the old store.

¶ Remember our Mr. Maine advertisement? It was Chapter X of the preliminary series. Created some talk.

¶ If it escaped your eye you had best look it up or send to us for a copy of it. The American printed it on Wednesday, August 28.

¶ We want you to see it because it describes just what could happen to you on a visit to the new Filene store for Boston men.

¶ You may not realize that ours is much more than a store for the dispensing of right merchandise at the right time. It is a public institution. It is the equivalent of a day hotel.

¶ A man may come here (as Mr. Maine did in fancy) and receive almost every day-service that a hotel provides.

¶ He may write or telephone. Later on he may send or receive wireless messages.

¶ He may go to our sanitary barber shop and get everything a good barber shop can give, even to chiropody.

¶ He may eat and he may smoke.

¶ What is more, all of his wardrobe needs will be met quickly and correctly and economically.

¶ In exclusively men's shops he will find every seasonable article of made-ready apparel.

¶ Merchandise brought together by men's-store experts from the best producing centres in America and abroad.

¶ Every thread of it new.

¶ Every line of it absolutely correct in style.

¶ Every price a Filene price. (Your mothers and wives and sisters and sweethearts can tell you what that means pursewise!)

¶ All of it classified. A shop for suits and overcoats. A shop for shirts. A shop for collars. A shop for hats. A shop for gloves. A shop for furs. A shop for motoring things. Thus to the end of the tog list.

¶ And so we are glad you are home when we are at home, Mr. Monday Morning.

¶ And we ask you to come in and be glad with us!

BOSTON BOYS NEED ONLY 11 MORE VICTORIES TO CLINCH PENNANT WHILE ATHLETICS MUST WIN ALL

SOX SECURE IN FLAG RACE, REAL FIGHT NOW IS FOR 2D PLACE

THE Red Sox will open their last campaign in the West at Chicago tomorrow. The coming champions have a commanding lead over the Athletics and the Senators.

Stahl's men have a 13½ game margin on Mack's hired men, while they are 14½ games ahead of Clark Griffith's scrappy band.

The Red Sox only need to win seven games in order to place the pennant in the strong box. They win probably only have to win seven or eight games in order to clinch the flag for the Athletics and the Senators will undoubtedly be humbled just as often as the Fenway Park team.

Should Do Well in West.

The Stahls will probably have the pennant won by the time that they reach Cleveland on their march home. The men will then be given a rest before the world series.

The Red Sox will have easier sailing in the West than they did here in the past ten days in which time they battled with the Athletics, New York Yankees and the Senators. The Sox took three straight from the Athletics, two straight from New York and three out of four from the Capital City team.

If Stahl's champions can do as well as this against the two runners up and the team that is playing the best ball of any of the second-division clubs, they should not run up against many snags in the West.

The series with the White Sox, which opens tomorrow and closes on Thursday, should be hard fought. Jimmy Callahan's squadron isn't a world beater but it is capable of giving a good account of itself. "Big Ed" Walsh is slated to pitch one of the games against the Red Sox and no spitball king usually experiences great success when opposed to the Red Sox.

Stahl will probably use Charley Hall in the opening game of the series. The "Sea Lion" has not worked for over a week and is in prime condition for the fray. Charley has done more than his share of pitching for the Red Sox this season, and from now on Stahl intends to let him take one easy so that he will be at his best for the world series.

Hall Wonderful Worker.

Hall is a wonderful worker and as game a ball player as ever played the game. Boston "fans" have seen Charley go into the box in a pinch time and again and save the day for the team. Clarke Griffith of the Senators believes that he will be one of the big stars of the world series.

Joe Wood and Ray Collins will also oppose Chicago. Joe has now won fourteen straight games and is anxious to break the American League record for consecutive victories which is held by Walter Johnson. The "Terrible Swede's" mark is 16. If "Smoky Joe" is successful in smashing Johnson's record he will then try and beat out the record of nineteen straight wins set by the sensational "Rube" Marquard.

The Sox will invade St. Louis on Friday, and will play the Browns Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Stovall's men have proved easy for the loyal team all season and Stahl has hopes of winning three straight games. If Wood wins his game in Chicago, he will surely equal Johnson's record in St. Louis as the Browns are a beaten team from the minute that the "Kansas Cyclone" enters the box.

Winds Up Campaign at Detroit.

The Red Sox will not play on next Monday. They will be on the road bound for Cleveland where they open on Tuesday. A double-header will probably be played on this day. The Red Sox wind up their Western campaign with a three game series with Detroit. Tigers who are now as tame as Mary's little lamb.

The Red Sox have been playing wonderful baseball all season and New England baseball "fans" are confident that they will win the world series in decisive fashion. The Stahls have been playing fully 30 per cent. better baseball during the past two months than the New York Giants have. If the Cubs had played any kind of baseball lately, they would now be in the lead in the National League flag race.

Chance's team, however, lacks class. It is composed of veteran ball players who have passed their days of usefulness on the diamond, and a number of youngsters who lack experience.

The Red Sox do not greatly fear the New York Giants. They believe that they will have an easy time in hitting Marquard and Matherson. Gotham baseball lovers claim that "Big Jeff" Tesreau will prove the sensation of the world's series. He is a good spitball pitcher, but the Red Sox are not afraid of him. He has not had a whole lot of experience and may be unable to stand the gaff in such an important series of games.

Busy Fall Season Mapped Out for Supporters of Manly Art

By JACK CONWAY.

THE boxing game is now in full swing throughout the country. Virtually every club of importance has opened for the coming season, and with hundreds of promising mitt wielders in the field some stirring contests should be waged.

New England fight "fans" will have an opportunity to witness an all-star show at the Pilgrim A. A. tomorrow night. There will be three ten-round bouts and there promises to be excitement galore.

The most interest is being displayed in the go between Frank Picato, the Italian lightweight champion, and Frank Loughrey of Philadelphia. Picato has been in Boston since the latter part of last week and is in grand condition for the fray.

Picato comes from a family of fighters. He is accompanied by his younger brother, who is known as "Babe" Picato. He is a featherweight and is rapidly gaining recognition. Frank has another brother by the name of Charley. These latter looks like a "comer." He has engaged in twelve bouts and has won eleven of them by a knockout. The other was a draw.

* * *

THE other two bouts should be replete with excitement. Tommy Howell and Dave Kurtz are scheduled to battel. Howell is well known to local ring followers, as he has appeared at the Armory A. A. on several occasions. His last bout was with Ray Brooks, the clever Indianapolis boxer. Tommy easily vanquished his opponent.

Kurtz has never appeared in this city, but has quite a reputation in New York. He weighs about 142 pounds, but has never been afraid to battle with the leading middleweights. He fought "Buck" Crouse several months ago and almost knocked Jimmy Mason's protege cold.

"Buck" thought that Kurtz was easy picking and refused to take things seriously. Toward the end of the bout the Pittsburgh fighter left himself unscreened for a second. Dave let go a terrific right-hand punch as quick as a flash and sent Crouse reeling against the ropes. He followed it up with a series of hard rights and lefts and almost put "buck" down for the count.

Dave Deshler will try and do a "come back" act when he mixes things with Johnny Willets of Philadelphia.

DANNY MORGAN is a clever prem agent. Nobody has ever had the nerve to deny this fact. The New York manager talked "K. O." Brown into two matches with Ad Wolgast and many other bouts with prominent mitt wielders. He is now trying to talk Jack Britton into a match with Packey McFarland or Ad Wolgast.

Morgan is elated over the fact that his battler knocked out Eddie Murphy in eleven rounds and is using the South Boston boy as a stepping stone to a McFarland-Britton match.

* * *

MORGAN has just sent out a series of circular letters describing the wonderful prowess of Britton. In order to make Britton look like the eighth wonder of the world, he has made Murphy out as superior to McFarland.

New England League Pitchers to Bolster Up the Yankee Squad

The Yankee pitching staff has been strengthened by the addition of Carl Thompson of Brockton and Chester Hoff of Lawrence, who just rejoined the team after having made splendid records in the New England League, which closed its season Saturday.

These two youngsters were placed in the minor league ranks for seasoning, and showed up so well that Wolverton lost no time in reclaiming them before the draft season opened.

The experience gained in the minors seems to have benefited them vastly, and there is a fine prospect that they will develop into big league stars.

Hoff was secured from the semi-pro ranks last Fall. As a member of the Cleveling team he attracted the attention of the Yankee scouts.

Made Big Hit in Lawrence.

Wolverton tried him out early in the season, and although he showed flashes of ability, it was evident that a season with a minor league team would greatly improve him as he lacked experience.

He was turned over to the Lawrence Club, and in a short time became the leading southpaw of the league. The fans there dubbed him the "Marquard of the New England League."

He won fourteen games and lost only two, thereby materially helping a pennant to Lawrence.

If he stands the test against major league batters now he will prove a valuable addition to the staff, for the Yankees have been minus the services of a southpaw since Jim Vaughn was turned over to Washington.

Thompson's Record.

Thompson is the collegian who made a splendid record in the South as a member of the University of Georgia nine.

Last May he struck out twenty-two batsmen in a nine-inning game, pitching against one of the strongest college nines in Dixie land.

In his debut in a big league, too, Thompson displayed enough ability to warrant the belief that time would make him a success in the big show. He was sent in to relieve one of the faltering Yankees at Cleveland.

The new man with which he handled such sluggers as Lajoie and Jackson caused no little comment, but in succeeding games it was apparent that he too lacked experience, so Wolverton shipped him to Brockton, where he made good, winning more than three-fourths of his games with a second division team.

While at college Thompson led as a battery mate his brother, who recently joined the Hillmen, and Wolverton may spring the only brother battery in the big league one of these days, for the younger Thompson is said to be a maskman of great ability.

The Yankee players think well of his work in practice, but it will take a few turns behind the bat in real contests to demonstrate what he can do.

Wolgast Wants $5,000 Plaster for Injury

CADILLAC, Mich., Sept. 9.—That the automobile crank which recently kicked back severely injured the arm with which Ad Wolgast opens his pocketbook is the belief of a number of followers of the fighting game here today, while the outcome of an interview between the champion lightweight and Tom Jones, his manager. Whether Ad's arm is sufficiently recovered to carry on his fight with Packey McFarland in New York depends on the ability of the Michigan fighter to "punish" the New York promoters for another $5,000.

Inside figures on the patch have come out. Instead of $22,500 for his end, picture rights barred, it has been discovered that Ad agreed to battle for $15,000 and a share of the picture receipts.

When Jones got the facts it hurt Ad's arm. Now, according to the worried manager of the little fighter it will require $3,000 to put the arm in shape to go into the ring. At first it was thought it would be necessary to put on a $15,000 plaster, but five will do the trick.

New York League Pennant Disputed

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 9.—The New York State League season came to a close yesterday, and the pennant is a matter of dispute between the Wilkesbarre and Utica Clubs.

Utica claims the flag by reason of its double victory over Syracuse yesterday, which, according to the league standing would give Utica a lead of one-half game over Wilkesbarre. Manager Clymer and the Wilkesbarre Club claim that the race is a tie.

The schedule calls for twenty-one games between Utica and Syracuse, and counting today's games these clubs have had twenty-two contests. One of the games played with Syracuse is claimed to have been an exhibition game; but the league rules clearly say that while the season is on no two of the league teams shall participate in exhibition games.

LOCHNAR WINS RACE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—George Lochnar of Syracuse, proved the best of the long-distance motorcycle riders at Brighton Beach. He won the fifty-mile race in easy fashion. Billy Wray of Brooklyn finished second, with Emil Eckel of New York third. Lochnar traveled the distance in 47 minutes 17 5-8 seconds.

Pilgrims' Games to Start at 3 O'Clock

Beginning tomorrow, all games at the South End Grounds will start at 3 o'clock, except in the case of double-headers, which will get under way at 1:45.

Maranville, an infielder secured from New Bedford, will report to the Pilgrims tomorrow, and will be played at some infield position, probably shortstop.

Al Bridgeriz's foot is quite too well, and Johnny Kling is planning to give the veteran a rest and give Maranville a chance to show what he can do.

IMPERIAL ASSO. TO HOLD BIG DANCE

The Imperial Associates will hold their annual concert and dance in Paine Memorial Hall, Appleton street, tonight. Dan Morgan, who will be here with Dave Kurtz, who buxes at the Pilgrim A. A., has promised to attend and will lead the grand march.

Final Games in City League Next Saturday

The final game of the season in the schedule of the Baseball League of the Municipal A. A., will be played at Peabody ground at 3:30 p. m. Saturday between the St. Augustines and the St. Vincent Catholic Club, both of South Boston. This game will decide the leadership in Group A.

The championship of Group B was decided Saturday in favor of the St. Aloysius A. A. of Hyde Park.

HAPPY STARS WIN IN THRILLING GAME

The Happy All Stars humbled "Jim" Reardon's team in a red hot game at Peddocks Island yesterday afternoon by a score of 15 to 14. Happy's team had to play its best game in order to win as the rival aggregation was there twenty different ways.

Happy claims that the reason why the game was so close was because he permitted "Jim" Reardon to select the umpire, but the latter says that he instructed the umpire in favor of the Stars so that the contest would resemble a real baseball game. The features of the game were the batting of "Jim" Reardon who slammed out four hits out of five trips to the plate, and Ray Williams, who got five tasty dingles.

QUINCY SQUAD OUT FOR TITLE

Fifty candidates for the Quincy High football team responded to the call issued last week by Captain Leon White and from the strong nucleus that is on hand, the Granite City bids fair to be well represented on the gridiron, although it is not expected that the team will come up to the calibre of last year's aggregation.

The squad at present is without the services of a coach, since Arthur Sisk, the Brown University star, has accepted a position as coach at Williston Seminary.

Of last year's team there remain in addition to Captain White, Quarterback Larkin, Left Tackle Young, Right Guard Brown, Fullback Southwick, and Crane and Prout, the last two mentioned having held down the end positions to great satisfaction.

A fine schedule of games has been arranged by Teacher-Manager Mansur and Assistant Manager Edward Brown, which includes contests with some of the best high school teams in Greater Boston.

The annual game with Brockton High, which for a number of years has been Quincy's greatest rival, will take place at Brockton this year on November 4. The list of games is as follows:

September 28.—Cambridge Latin at Cambridge.
October 1.—Weymouth High at Weymouth.
October 4.—Hingham High at Hingham.
October 8.—Melrose High at Melrose.
October 12 (a. m.)—Medford High at Medford.
October 16.—South Boston High at Quincy.
October 18.—Abington High at Quincy.
October 22.—Open.
October 26.—Everett High at Everett.
November 8.—Roxbury High at Brockton.
November 15.—Ridge Manual Training School at Quincy.
November 25.—Waltham High at Waltham.

Beauty Secrets of Footlight Favorites

HOW TO ADAPT VEGETARIANISM TO YOUR NEEDS

MISS MARIE BAXTER.

(Another of the beauties in Ziegfeld's "Winsome Widow" Company).

By MARIE BAXTER

ONLY once in my life did I make an attempt at "beauty culture"—before I found the ordinary care that every vain girl bestows upon herself.

Don't challenge that adjective—every girl is vain, or ought to be. It's vanity that makes the feminine world go 'round, until love comes upon the scene.

I was spending the Summer in one of those delightful places where the higher thought cults abound and almost every person belongs to a different kind of religion and dotes upon a special sort of "ism." I was the youngest person at the resort and naturally was made much of by the older people, who expected me to become a devotee of their especial fads.

The Vegetarian Cult

One beautiful old lady made a great impression upon me and finally won me over to her "ism" by telling me that it would make me a raving beauty and give me a long life.

She was a vegetarian and I became one, too, but in the country; in the pure, invigorating air, bread and milk, vegetables and fruit formed my diet and I never was so well in my life. My complexion was perfect. I say that truthfully and without exaggeration. My eyes were bright and the white part of the eye clear and a little blueish, like that of a healthy child.

"Vegetarianism" was my answer to those who asked how I had accomplished this change in my appearance, and I preached the gospel of a meatless diet with as much enthusiasm as any of the others.

Back to Town

I returned to town in September and began rehearsing.

My new fad rather upset the household, for there were so many things I would not eat—no soup, no meat or fish, no dish with meat sauce, and often I felt hungry after eating what I could of the family dinner. My rosy cheeks soon vanished and purple shadows came under my eyes. My voice also seemed to lose resonance.

I had a good deal of dancing to do in the new play, and at rehearsals I grew tired before the others.

One day, seeing me stumble over a new step, the stage manager snarled at me and I broke into tears.

He was a kind-hearted man. They often are despite their manner.

"What's the matter, little girl?" he asked.

"Oh, my feet are like lead, and the rest of me's like cotton," I sobbed.

The Reason Thereof

Now, he was a very sensible man, and after finding out that I was neither worried nor ill he asked me what I had eaten for lunch.

"Tomato salad and lemonade," I answered.

He looked flabbergasted.

"She's a vegetarian!" explained the other girls, "and never eats real food."

The stage manager sent me out to get a beefsteak and potatoes and I came back feeling as if new blood flowed in my veins.

"Don't try the vegetarian stunt while you're working hard," he said. "It's all very well in the country, where you are sure of getting fresh vegetables, pure, rich milk and you can always nibble at a bit of cake or fruit between times. City milk and vegetables hardly nourish a rabbit, and certainly wilted greens and separated milk, which are all you can buy here for love or money, are not the things for you growing girls.

Good Advice

"You are not eating enough—few vegetarians do. Eat meat once a day anyhow and you will look and feel better."

I have followed his advice, which was virtually the same as the doctor's whom I insisted on consulting.

In Winter, when I am in town I eat meat sparingly, but at least once a day—beef or lamb usually. In Summer, when I am in the country, I eat no meat at all. The doctor says that if all women did this they would never grow very fat and many complexion troubles would be avoided.

Being a vegetarian is almost a business in itself, because you have to spend so much time and thought combining the right kind of foods. Most people who try eat by eating things like my luncheon of salad and lemonade, which contained no nutriment at all, and that is why they are not a success.

Kitchen Wrinkles

Ink stains on garments can be soaked out in a mixture of salt and milk. A teaspoonful of salt to nearly a gill of milk is the right proportion. This answers for either white or colored fabrics, but if the ink has been allowed to dry it will be necessary to soak the stained part in the milk for an hour or two.

A good way to keep the air of a room fresh and slightly perfumed is to place a jar in some inconspicuous place in the room, and put in the jar a small block of ammonia, over which pour some ordinary Cologne water. This makes a faint, pleasant odor of which one is dimly conscious.

Bran is much better to use for cleaning matting than soap and water. Tie the bran in a bag, dip the bag into clean warm water, and rub the matting briskly with this; then wash it off with a cloth wrung out of warm water. This method freshens it up wonderfully.

It is said that lemon juice will help to remove warts if they are touched with it three or four times daily. The juice may be applied with a camel-hair brush, or the squeezed rind of a lemon, in which some juice remains, may be rubbed over the warts frequently.

To remove grease from boards, take two ounces each of Fuller's earth and pearlash and boil them in a pint of water. Stir well and apply to the boards, leaving the paste on for twenty-four hours. Then scrub off in the usual way.

Dishes which have become brown and burned from baking in the oven may be easily cleaned after they have stood a while in borax water.

A tablespoonful of melted cocoa or chocolate stirred into the poor man's rice pudding quite changes the character of the dessert.

The Flirtatious Employer

HOW A GIRL MAY SAFEGUARD HERSELF FROM THIS TYPE OF INSIDIOUS OFFICE TYRANT.

By DOROTHY DIX

THE most shameful thing on earth is that the pretty young girl who is forced by necessity to earn her own living so often has to fight for her bread and butter with one hand, while she defends her honor with the other.

It is pitiful enough, Heaven knows, for any young girl not to have the shelter, and the softness, and the protection of a good home about her. It is sad enough that any girl should miss the carefreeness, and the innocent foolish pleasures of girlhood when a new frock and a dance can encompass the sum of happiness.

It is tragic enough that any little frail, tender, weak girl should be cast out into the thick of the battle of life to be bruised and buffeted, and wounded in the fierce struggle. But it is a blot on our boasted civilization that these hapless and defenceless little creatures should be put in the very forefront of the firing line, and that they should have to bear a greater danger, and take a greater risk than any man ever does.

For the youth who goes out to seek his fortune has but to fight other men. The girl who goes out to seek her fortune has only too commonly to fight men, and men who are wolves in sheep's clothing seeking to devour her. The boy has no sex problem to deal with. The girl is eternally confronted with it.

Of course, not every employer is a gay Lothario. There are men who are just as chivalrous in their offices and stores as they are in their parlors, and with whom any girl is as safe as she would be with her own father. There are other employers to whom their female employes are sexless, just cogs in the commercial machine that they are running, and a girl is in no danger from them.

Unfortunately, however, there are only too many employers who make their offices a hunting ground for their flirtations, and in which they stalk down youth and innocence, and destroy them as ruthlessly as any pot hunter ever does a fluttering bird.

Are Seldom Young

It is a further disgrace to humanity that these men are seldom young. On the contrary, they are generally elderly, with wives and children, and respectable positions in society and the church, and protected by these bulwarks they safely prey upon the helpless little girls who come to them in search of work.

In the offices of such men no middle-aged or homely woman could get a situation, no matter how competent she was. They pick out their stenographers and bookkeepers by their complexions, and not by their ability. Nor can any girl keep her place unless she submits to insulting familiarities. A kiss is the price of her job.

It's all very well to say that when an employer develops flirtatious tendencies the girl should adopt a haughty unbending air, and stalk majestically out of the office. Undoubtedly, if most of them did what they feel like doing under the circumstances they would arise and bat the elderly masher over the head with their typewriters, and ask him what he thought a pretty young girl could see in a fat, bald, bleary-eyed old grandpa to make her want to tread the primrose path with him.

Unfortunately, however, needs must when the devil drives, and the cruelest thing about poverty is that it clips the wings of our dignity and forces us to endure humiliations that make our blood boil.

The girl whose own shelter and food, and that of those nearest and dearest to her, depends upon her keeping her situation cannot throw up her job. She has nowhere to go, nothing to do. She knows that there are a dozen applicants for every vacancy in an office.

She is bound to the wheel. She must stay on. She can't even flee from the dangers she sees.

One girl thus sorely driven has written me a letter in which she asks me if I can give her some good strong arguments that a girl can use with an employer who is always telling her how unhappy he is at home, and how incompetent and unsympathetic his wife is, and how she can comfort him by permitting him to kiss her, and go out to dinner with him.

A Pathetic Letter

"I loathe his very touch," writes the girl; "it disgusts me to hear him abuse his wife, but I don't know how to stop him without offending him, because I have a mother dependent on me and I don't know what will become of us if I should lose my place."

Alas, little sister, I feel that there are no good, strong arguments by which you can appeal to such a man's better nature. He is taking advantage of your dependence on him. He forces his unwelcome attention on you because he knows that you have to endure them or starve, and no man who wasn't a cad and a coward would do that.

It is, therefore, hopeless to represent to him that your necessity puts you in his power, and ask him to treat you as he would have some other man treat his daughter, or his little sister if poverty should some day force her to go to work as you have done.

Nor will it do any good to assume a tragedy queen attitude and make a scene unless you are able to do the one thing that prudence demands should be done under the circumstances, and that is to walk out of the office, and try to get work with a gentleman instead of a brute.

If a man is an utter beast nothing but flight will save you, and when it comes to a showdown put on your hat and go, because it is better to starve than it is to lose your self-respect.

Against these no girl is skilful enough or strong enough to defend herself in a hand-to-hand conflict, but she may often fence successfully with the employer who is merely flirtatious. She can, for instance, generally stop a man from talking against his wife by siding with the wife, and showing an utter lack of sympathy and interest in his tale of woe.

Being exceedingly and totally businesslike and professional in all of her dealings with her employer is another foxy attitude to assume, because in that way she can, if she will, keep sentiment off of the carpet. Let your communication be yes, yes, and nay, nay in an endeavor that the business girl may well adopt in dealing with all the men about her. As long as you stick to brass tacks you are reasonably sure of not provoking any man to kiss you.

An Admonition

Obtuseness to everything but your work is also another good weapon for the working girl to use in her own defense. A very wise old man of the world once gave this admonition to a young woman who was going into an office:

"When men tell you a suggestive joke or say anything with a double meaning in your presence, don't be shocked and say, 'How dare you!' Look the man blankly in the face as if you didn't understand him. For there are very few men who have got the nerves to explain an off-colored speech to a woman who is so pure minded she doesn't know what such things mean."

That's a good thing to try on the old masher, too. But it is a burning shame that any girl who is willing to work to earn an honest living should not have the way made safe for her. There should be a society organized for the elimination of the employer who tries to flirt with the girls whose bread and butter depends upon compliance with his pleasure. And it should be something with boiling oil in it. Love!

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

AN UNBROKEN THREAD

By FRANCES I. GARESIDE

WHEN a woman begins a narrative, neither time nor distance, nor disaster, nor grief, nor great change of any kind can do more than interrupt, it is a thread that is never broken.

On this thread she strings a few meaningless words, fastening them together with a big knot called "And so."

Daysey Mayme Appleton met a friend on the streets, and began to string a conversational thread.

"He came early," she said, "AND SO I gave him a chair, and then she came. AND SO"—

The air was split with a shrill whistle. There was a sound of bells, a cry of alarm, and Daysey Mayme and her friend reached the walk just in time to escape being run down by the fire engine.

The fire was in the next block. They picked up their bobbies and ran to it, getting there before the fire horses. It was a spectacular fire, and the rescue of three women from the tenth story made the proceedings grow like mushrooms.

Daysey Mayme and her friend were interested spectators for two hours. As they turned away Daysey Mayme took her friend's arm and began:

"AND SO at first I didn't know what to do. You know they used to be engaged, but I had a happy thought. AND SO"—

They had reached the station, the friend's train was due, and they gave each other what women call a kiss, but which is more like a hen picking speciatively at a pebble, and the friend was gone.

Three years later, Daysey Mayme met the friend again.

"AND SO," she resumed, as if there had been no interruption, "it was embarrassing for me. AND SO I said to him"—

Other friends arrived, and they were separated.

A few months later Daysey Mayme was badly injured. She was taken to a hospital and put under the influence of ether.

When she revived, and opened her eyes, it was to behold all her family, attended by the dear friend.

The bandages were stiff and tight. She felt as if floating on nothing into nowhere. It hurt her to breathe. Speech was next to impossible.

Looking feebly around her, there came a sudden gleam of remembrance into her eyes. With her eyes fixed on the friend, she began in the faintest and weakest of whispers:

"AND SO"—

A Question of Time

"Solly," said Izzy, rushing excitedly up to his friend in the smoking room of the Twisters' Club, "lend us a fiver for a moment—only for a moment."

"Quite sure you only want it for a moment?" queried Solly, suspiciously.

"Quite sure—only for a moment," replied Izzy, nearly dancing with agitation.

"Very well, then; wait a moment, and then you won't want it."

Unhorsing an Emperor

The Glories of Ancient Rome Reverenced by Its Animating Spirit of To-day

LOWERING THE BRONZE FIGURE OF THE EMPEROR MARCUS AURELIUS FROM HIS HORSE

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

EVERY visitor to Rome will remember the huge bronze statue of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, seated on his bronze horse, in front of the old Capitol. The pedestal was designed by the great Michael Angelo, but the statue is far older work.

This Summer they have taken the old Emperor down from his horse, which he has bestrode for centuries, and removed him to the Capitoline Museum, where artists are going to "restore" him—for the ravages of times have made sad work upon him. In the long run, an Emperor in bronze is no more immortal than one in flesh and blood.

It was a considerable undertaking to unhorse Marcus Aurelius, as the photograph shows, but the operation was successfully conducted, and for some time to come tourists in the Eternal City will see only a big wooden shed covering the pedestal, from which he stretched forth his imperial hand with a gesture of command. With what some persons will regard as a fine sense of propriety, they hooded the Emperor's face while taking him down, as if to prevent him from looking upon his own abasement. But the real reason was to save his finely moulded features from damage additional to that which time had already inflicted upon them.

This undertaking, had it occurred in any other city, with any other old statue, would have been a matter of local importance only, but it really had a world-wide interest, partly because all nations have a certain pride in the antiquities of Rome, yet mainly because it reveals, in a very striking form, the growth of the new spirit of nationality in Italy. It is akin to the impulse which made the Venetians, when the tower of the Campanile of St. Mark fell with a great crash a few years ago, immediately set to work to restore it, after the old model. It is also akin to the spirit which has produced the enormous monument of Victor Emmanuel in Rome, a work so vast and splendid that, but for the prestige which covers them, the other monuments of the ancient capital of the world would seem diminished in its presence.

This spirit is new at work everywhere in Italy. It is pushing on the excavations at Pompeii, as well as in the Forums, and in many other places where the glories of old Rome lie buried. But it is not altogether a revival of the cultivation of art and history. It has produced a marvellous transformation in the plains and cities of Piedmont and Lombardy, where the traveler now sees long rows of smoking chimneys towering above the poplars, the flower gardens, and the cathedrals, and proclaiming the reign of modern industry. Nowhere has electric power been further developed than in northern Italy. Nowhere are the latest results of practical science more promptly utilized.

Italy is awake—wider awake than it has been since the days of Caesar. Indeed, one is tempted to think that, somehow, the spirit of that wonderful genius now inspires the descendants of his fellow-citizens, so long apparently submerged by the influx of foreign blood which came pouring in from every side after the fall of the imperial power.

That come, at least, of the Italians now dream of Caesar, as many Frenchmen do of Napoleon, is curiously shown by an incident connected with the unhorsing of the statue of Marcus Aurelius. Now, that the statue is down, the "Young Nationalists" have demanded that, instead of replacing it on its pedestal, after it has been "restored," it be sent to some less conspicuous place, while a statue of Caesar be set up in its stead, on the plaza of the Capitol.

Marcus Aurelius was a philosopher. He could fight, and he did fight, when he had to—and he fought well—but his was not the spirit of a conqueror. He was mild and gentle in his thoughts and manners. He put conscience above everything else, and his true glory, for centuries, has consisted in his book of "Thoughts," one of the greatest moral treatises in existence.

This type of man does not fit in very well with the ambition of those who want to restore the military glory of Italy, to make her a great European power, with formidable fleets of battleships and armies that must be taken into account when the nations go to war. But Caesar was a man after their own heart. Seated on his bronze warhorse, in front of the Capitol, he would, they think, better represent the Italy that they dream of—an Italy to be feared as well as admired.

So, there are three aspects of the new Italy that are revealed by these recent events; first, the aspiration toward art and the cultivation of history; second, the determination to keep abreast of the modern world in practical scientific advance, and third, the desire to make Rome once more a name of power because of the weight of her mailed hand.

Evidently was the charmer, has not yet lost its potency over the human spirit. The gospel of Peace will have to be preached still for many centuries before it has altogether banished its pamphlet of foe.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I WAS out in the Dorchester pastures yesterday, picking daisies," said the Manicure Lady. "Goo, George, but it made me feel fine. Why is it that daisies seems like the finest flowers in the world? Maybe the reason is that they grow outside of hothouses, and that the sight of them is like looking at a clean little baby girl all ready to go to Sunday school."

"I guess you like them because they are natural," suggested the Head Barber. "They ain't as pretty as hothouse roses, but they are kind of natural. I like natural blossoms, the same as I like regular men. Long years of this have Boston teach me that there ain't many daisies or regular men left. They're dying out, kid; dying out."

"But I was going to tell you about Wilfred," said the Manicure Lady. "George, it was sure kind of pathetic to see the poor kid on that outing. The old gent had turned him kind of hard in the forenoon on account of Wilfred wanting an extra five dollars for that carfare that he is all the time talking about; so he acted kind of verbose all the way out to the end of the line."

"You mean morose," corrected the Head Barber. "Verbose means lots of talk, like you talking all the time to me. I wish I could ever get you right on them words that expresses meaning."

"I don't think you express much meaning," said the Manicure Lady. "I don't think you could bring any meaning home on a dray, George. let alone expressing it. But as I was saying, Wilfred romped around like a colt in a pasture. Every daisy that he picked for me was the clean—go—one for him to come over and say something sweet to me. He wrote about eight different poems during the afternoon. Every one of them sounded a little like every other poem that he had ever wrote and a lot more like a lot of pesons that other poets had wrote, but that didn't make no difference to my dear, darling brother. What's one of the nice things about a poet or a song writer, George. Nothing that they cop off the other people seems to make them think less of the real beauty of the original. Get this, for instance: Wilfred was settling on the grass under a tree, with a ham sandwich in one hand and a daisy in the other, and he spouts this:

"Sweet bunch of daisies, fresh from the dell,
Kiss me once, sweetheart, Daisies won't tell.

Give me your promises, please, darling, do.
Darling, I love you. Will you be true?"

"He was taking," said the Head Barber. "That song was wrote a long time ago."

"So was lots of the other songs that Wilfred wrote," said the Manicure Lady. "That don't bother Wilfred none, though. I guess it don't bother the song publishers, either."

"You bet it don't," said the Head Barber. "The song publishers are too busy copping for themselves."

25 CENT "DANDERINE" FOR FALLING HAIR AND DANDRUFF---GROWS HAIR

Don't pay 50 cents for worthless hair tonics—Use old, reliable, harmless "Dandering"—Get results.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast.

A little Danderine tonight—now—anytime—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application you will say it was the best investment you ever made. Your hair will immediately take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy; and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

PART I.—(Continued).

"NO, Mr. Sweetwater. I'm a poor working girl, with very little education and almost no knowledge of the world and such ladies as she. But something tells me, for all that, that she was too nice to do this. I saw her once, and it made me want to be quiet and kind and beautiful like her. I never shall think she did anything so horrible. Nor will Mr. Brotherson ever believe it. He could not and live. You see, I am talking to you as if you knew him—he kind of man he is and just how he feels towards Miss Challoner. He is"—Her voice trailed off and a look, uncommon and almost elevated, illumined her face. "I will not tell you what he is; you will know, if you ever see him."

"If the favorable opinion of a whole town makes a good fellow, he ought to be of the best," returned Sweetwater, with his most honest smile. "I hear but one story of him wherever I turn."

"There is but one story to tell," she smiled, and her head drooped softly, but with no air of self-consciousness.

Sweetwater watched her for a moment, and then remarked: "I'm going to take one thing for granted; that you are as anxious as we are to clear Miss Challoner's memory."

"Oh, yes. Oh, yes."

"More than that, that you are ready and eager to help us. Your very looks show that."

"You are right; I would do anything to help you. But what can a girl like me do? Nothing; nothing. I know too little. Mr. Challoner must see that when you tell him I'm only the daughter of a forwoman."

"And a friend of Mr. Brotherson," supplemented Sweetwater.

"Yes," she smiled, "he would want me to say so. But that's his goodness. I don't deserve the honor."

"His friend and therefore his confidante," Sweetwater continued. "He has talked to you about Miss Challoner?"

Some Questions

"He had to. There was nobody else to whom he could talk; and then, I had seen her and could understand."

"Where did you see her?"

"In New York. I was there once with father, who took me to see her. I think she had asked Mr. Brotherson to send his little friend to her hotel if ever we came to New York."

"That was some time ago?"

"We were there in June."

"And you have corresponded ever since with Miss Challoner?"

"She has been good enough to write, and I have ventured at times to answer her."

The suspicion which might have come to some men found no harbor in Sweetwater's mind. This young girl was beautiful, there was no denying that—beautiful in a somewhat startling and quite unusual way; but there was nothing in her bearing, nothing in Miss Challoner's letters to indicate that she had been a cause for jealousy in the New York lady's mind. He, therefore, ignored this possibility, pursuing his inquiry along the direct lines he had already laid out for himself. Smiling a little, but in a very earnest fashion, he pointed to the letter she still held and quietly said:

"Remember that I'm not speaking for myself, Miss Scott, when I seem a little too persistent and inquiring. You have corresponded with Miss Challoner, you have been told the fact of her secret engagement to Mr. Brotherson and you have been witness to his conduct and manner for the whole time he has been separated from her. Do you, when you think of it carefully, recall anything in the whole story of this romance which would throw light upon the cruel tragedy which has so unexpectedly ended it? Anything, Miss Scott? Straws show which way the stream flows."

She was vehement, instantly vehement in her disclaimer.

"I can answer at once," said she, "because I have thought of nothing else for all these weeks. Here all was well. Mr. Brotherson was hopeful and happy and believed in her happiness and willingness to wait for his success. And this success was coming so fast! Oh, how can we ever tell him! How can we ever answer his questions even, or keep him satisfied and calm until he is strong enough to bear the truth? I've had to acknowledge already that I have had no letter from her for weeks. She never wrote to him directly, you know, and she never sent him messages, but he knew that a letter to me was also a letter to him, and I can see that he is troubled by this long silence, though he says I was right not to let her know of his illness and that I must continue to keep her in ignorance of it till he is quite well again and can write to her himself. It is hard to bear him talk like this and not look sad or frightened."

Sweetwater remembered Miss Challoner's last letter, and wished he had it here, to give her. In default of this, he said:

"Perhaps this not hearing may act in the way of a preparation for the shock which must come to him sooner or later. Let us hope so, Miss Scott."

Her eyes filled.

Reason Enough

A commercial traveller at a railway station in one of the Southern towns included in his order for breakfast two boiled eggs. The old darky who served him brought him three.

"Uncle," said the travelling man, "Why in the world did you bring me three boiled eggs? I only ordered two."

"Yes, sir," said the old darkey, bowing and smiling. "I knew you did order two, sir but I brought three because I just naturally felt dat one of dem might fail you, sir."

Golf in Germany

The Picturesque Girl Caddie of Thuringia

A GROUP OF GIRL CADDIES IN THEIR PICTURESQUE NATIVE DRESS

IT is not only the German golfer who is beginning to recognize that girl caddies have many advantages over the boy caddie, but golfers in England, France and other European countries are also employing them with great success. And this is perhaps as it should be. The employment of boys at a time of life when they should be learning some useful trade constitutes a source of real danger to the youth of this or any other country. The girls are also said to be more intelligent and generally quicker and in many other ways more fitted for the occupation, which is health-giving without being too strenuous.

The Boston Sunday American Will Pay $40,000 to Its Readers for Work in Pushing Its Circulation to the Half Million Mark

Few people live in the great territory of New England who would not consider $10,000 in cash a comfortable fortune. But few people in the section referred to will ever accumulate that much money or even expect to do so.

So, that if we were to impart the information to you, the MAN, WOMAN, BOY OR GIRL WHO IS READING THIS AT THE PRESENT MOMENT, just how you may EARN $10,000 IN CASH, you would consider that the most interesting and important bit of information you had received in a long time, if not in your whole life—now, wouldn't you!

The purpose of this article is not only to tell you just that very thing but much MORE THAN THAT—how the readers of the Sunday AMERICAN may earn $40,000 in cash and prizes in return for work that may be done with comparatively little effort for the magnificent return.

Elsewhere on this page you will find the details of this remarkable and alluring offer. It will probably only be necessary here to WHET YOUR APPETITE with the fact that at the top of the proposition are these facts:

ONE PERSON MAY EARN $10,000 IN CASH.

FIVE OTHERS MAY EACH EARN $1,000 IN CASH.

AND THE WHOLE OF THE $40,000 IN THE STUPENDOUS OFFER IS AVAILABLE TO THOSE WHO WILL MAKE AN EARNEST, SINCERE EFFORT, TO OBTAIN IT.

The Sunday AMERICAN, of course, is not spending this immense sum of money without expecting a compensating return. But this newspaper is willing to expend this amount to attain a laudable ambition—THE SWELLING OF THE SUNDAY AMERICAN CIRCULATION TO THE HALF MILLION MARK!

This is not by any means an impossible task, or even a very difficult one, IF ALL OF THE READERS OF THE PAPER JOIN HANDS IN THE WORK.

Remember, you are to be paid for the work, and paid well. In other words, the Sunday AMERICAN, in a way, takes its readers into its employment for the accomplishment of this task.

The circulation of the Sunday AMERICAN is 400,000 now, many thousands more than any other Boston or New England Sunday newspaper. All that has to be done is to add 25 per cent. to this figure WITH THE CHANCE OF BEING PAID $10,000 IN CASH FOR YOUR EFFORTS.

It is conceded that the Sunday AMERICAN, New England's youngest newspaper, IS IT'S BEST. It is not necessary to recite here the SUPERIOR news, special features and pictures that make of this the HIGHEST CLASS and the FINEST QUALITY newspaper published in New England.

It is for that reason that a circulation of 500,000 is not a dream, but a reality of the near future.

Do not forget the pay—$10,000 in cash for ONE and $40,000 in cash and prizes for ALL of the winners in the 500,000 circulation feat!

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS AND ALL THE LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

Stock Market Quiet at Start; Cotton Is Higher

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, Sept. 9.—MONDAY: The Boston market was firm at the beginning but before the end of the first hour prices had become irregular. Trading was quiet. Wolverine, Old Colony, Mayflower, Alaska and United Fruit were in the recessional list, while North Butte, Chino, Ruttc and Superior and Pond Creek had advanced.

Wolverine directors today declared a semi-annual dividend of $5 a share, the same amount as was declared six months ago. The dividend is payable October 1 and books close September 14 and reopen September 23.

In August the Arizona Copper Co. produced 3,200,000 pounds of copper, compared with 2,720,000 in August, 1911. The Ray Consolidated production for the same month was 3,040,160 pounds, compared with 3,105,165 pounds in June, while August output of the Old Dominion Mining Co. amounted to 2,020,000 pounds of bilistered copper, an increase of 635,000 pounds compared with the corresponding month a year ago.

Effect of Ginning Report.

When the cotton market opened in New York, traders put a bullish interpretation upon the ginning report—printed below—with the result of sending first prices 3 to 17 points higher. Buying orders came from a number of sources. Futures in Liverpool were firm and spot was active.

New York Opens Irregular.

Prices were irregular when the New York market opened. Trading was quiet. At the start Canadian Pacific showed the most gain. This was largely due to the buying of that issue in London. Union Pacific, which sold ex-dividend, opened at 169 after closing Saturday at 172. The size of the dividend was 2½ per cent., thus meaning a loss of ½ for the issue in the first transaction. Steel, after opening unchanged, declined ⅛. Amalgamated opened ¼ lower, but subsequently rallied and recovered. American Smelting also dropped ⅛. Reading lost ⅜, while Missouri Pacific made the same showing. Southern Pacific was up ⅛, but Southern Railway was unchanged.

The Curb was strong.

Americans in London were irregular. The copper metal market there was easy at the start, with spot off 3s. 9d. and futures 1s. 3d. lower.

Cotton Ginning Report.

In its first report of the season, issued at Washington today, the Census Bureau gives the amount of cotton ginned to September 1, counting round bales as halves, and excluding linters, as 720,226 bales. This compares with 771,297 last year, 353,017 in 1910, 388,242 in 1909, and 402,229 in 1908.

Financial News in Brief.

Consols opened the week with a decline.

Norfolk & Western gross operating revenue for July increased $526,127, while the net income gain was $286,978.

On September 1, 1911, railroads had 54,000 idle cars. This year 90 days later the number was 9,700.

It is estimated that total crop value this year will exceed that of last by at least $1,000,000,000.

Oscar S. Straus, Progressive candidate for Governor of New York, is chairman of the board which is arbitrating the wage dispute between engineers and railroads.

A New York newspaper says John D. Rockefeller's estate at Pocantico Hills has an underground passage, guarded by massive steel doors, leading to subterranean strong rooms where the oil millionaire might seek refuge if his house were besieged.

The August gross earnings of a dozen representative roads were $2,000,000 greater than the June totals.

J. W. Bowen & Co. have published a folder upon the American Telephone and Telegraph and subsidiary companies for 1911, which contains interesting compilations.

Edward Low Ranlett writes on behalf of Thompson, Towle & Co.: "It is impossible to conclude that the cotton market could be advanced and sustained at present levels unless there had been a change of heart among leaders previously actively working for a decline. Perhaps after all it is only an enormous short interest covering, but it might be that crop conditions have alarmed the world's spinners and that they cannot go longer without some protection."

This year's yield of potatoes probably will be $2,263,000 bushels larger than that of 1911, the increase in the hay crop is estimated at 26,856,000 tons and the increase of the principal grains at 859,000,000 bushels.

Decision by the Supreme Court of the United States on rate, the anthracite trust and Harriman merger cases are expected soon after the tribunal convenes in Washington next month.

The total of new securities issued last month was $144,726,000, which is $92,210,000 in excess of the output in the same month in 1911.

Hunt, Ellis & Co. say: "There seems to be good foundation for the rumor that the shareholders of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation will before long receive a dividend on the preferred stock. The question may be taken up by the directors the latter part of this year, but it is not likely that a dividend will be paid until the first half of 1913. For the first half of this year Bethlehem Steel earned at the rate of 7 per cent., on the preferred stock and over 8 per cent. on the common stock. No dividend has been paid on the preferred stock since February, 1907, notwithstanding that net profits available for dividends in that year were equal to 11 per cent. on the preferred in 1908 2.40 per cent.; in 1909 5.37 per cent.; in 1910 12.50 per cent.; in 1911, 13.70 per cent. Earnings this year will be at least equal to those of the preceding year. Bethlehem Steel preferred is non-cumulative, which accounts for the narrow margin between the selling price of that stock and the common."

The Missouri, Kansas & Texas is doing well and everything indicates final large and net revenues will substantially increase in the succeeding months. Lowest last year were due to exceptional causes. The road is now in better physical shape and can carry freight at less cost.

Auto News

BY J. C. KERRISON.

With the season for closed cars at hand the R-C-H Corporation announces a new coupe for which a popularity in keeping with that gained by other R-C-H models can safely be predicted. The new coupe is one of the most attractive cars of this type ever marketed. The body, built to accommodate three persons, is very roomy and handsomely finished. The standard R-C-H color scheme, red and black, is continued in the exterior finish, while the interior upholstering is a beautiful dark gray whipcord. Each window is provided with silk shades to match the upholstering, giving the whole car the same dressy appearance.

The body is mounted on the regular R-C-H 110-inch wheelbase chassis, as in the touring car and long wheelbase roadster. The equipment is as generous as in all the R-C-H 1913 models, including, as it does, five electric lights with 100-ampere hour axide storage battery, 32x3½ non-skid tires, all around, Warner autometer and demountable rim. On the rear deck is mounted a twenty-six gallon gasoline tank and a large trunk with a slip cover. With each car a patented locking device holder and extra demountable rim is also furnished.

The R. L. & H. S. Smith Company, distributors for the "Brown" internal gear drive commercial car, have just had word from their factory that orders are coming in rapidly for these cars. The latest achievement of Will H. Brown, formerly with the Main Motor Truck Company, is the sale of fifty of these cars to the United States Government.

* * *

The Brown car is in a moderate sized truck of 3,500-pound capacity, which incorporates in the latest and best known ideas of truck manufacture, including the internal gear drive, made famous by the Mais and Daimler.

* * *

The construction of the multiple dry disc clutch, on the Brown commercial car, which is housed in the unit power plant, is self adjusting, and therefore is perfectly smooth in action. The construction dates back to 1904, when the dry multiple disc clutch was first used by this company. It is constructed of steel plates with leather-faced plates for the grip.

In 1907 cork inserts, which at that time were very popular, were inserted in place of the leather-faced discs, and they gave a particularly smooth acting clutch in every respect, but on the advent of asbestos and the asbestos-faced disc, they were able to use a far superior material, namely, asbestos combined with copper wires and plaited together, forming a braided band which in turn is riveted to the steel plates.

Their present dry clutch consists of eight smooth steel discs connected with seven steel discs faced with woven wire and asbestos, and this makes a practically indestructible clutch, as it positively cannot burn, and will wear the life of the car.

$15 Lowest Family Can Live on, Says Mayor Fitzgerald

Fifteen dollars a week is the minimum on which an American family can exist. This is the opinion of Mayor Fitzgerald in a letter to Michael F. O'Brien, national president of the Federation of State, City and Town Employees' Unions, in answer to his inquiry as to what the Mayor intended to do regarding the request of the Boston City Men's Unions for a $2.50-a-day wage scale.

The Mayor reiterated that he had decided to grant that wage, and added that he had instructed the heads of departments employing laborers to include in their budgets provision for it.

President O'Brien read the letter at the meeting of Sanitary and Street Cleaning Teamsters and Helpers' Union No. 140. The union's committee, which had received a similar promise from Mayor Fitzgerald, stated that the new rates probably would be in effect by Christmas.

MUCK TO SAIL FOR BOSTON ON SEPT. 24

The return of Dr. Muck as conductor after four years' absence is by all odds the most interesting feature of the 32d season of the Symphony Orchestra, which is to open Friday afternoon, October 11, and Saturday evening, October 12. As was announced last Spring Dr. Muck was finally released from his engagement in Berlin, where he has been conductor of the Opera for the past seven years, and was able to fulfill his promise to return to Boston as soon as this had been brought about.

Dr. Muck and Mrs. Muck sail for this country on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie on September 24, arriving in Boston a week later and intend going at once to housekeeping in an apartment they have leased in Commonwealth avenue.

And Then There's Another Pennant We Want for Boston

The American League Flag will Do Very Well for Sport, and Everybody in New England Will Be PROUD OF IT, but Boston Is ALSO GOING AFTER THE PENNANT IN THE GREAT WORLD-LEAGUE OF BUSINESS. By the Way, How Much Do You Know About Boston in Business?

In some of the public schools of Boston, soon to reopen for the scholastic year, the instructors have a WISE custom of taking their geography classes out of doors, to study local geography ON THE GROUND. In this manner the young people learn that phase of the great study which is likely to be of most immediate use to them. They come to know the streets, the railroad terminals, the street railway lines, surface and elevated, the parks, the public buildings and so on.

Something like this class in geography might well be devised for some of the GROWN-UPS in this community; NOT MANY, but a noisy, aggravating SOME.

These are the gentlemen who loudly lament, on occasion, that Boston is not keeping up with the procession, that her men of great wealth made no effort to help her, that she fell asleep soon after the Revolution and FORGOT TO LEAVE A CALL.

These chronic grumblers—every community has its share of them—OUGHT TO GO TO SCHOOL. They should join a Boston class in BOSTON geography and business.

It is quite evident, for one thing, that the unimportant few who talk like this do not know that, according to the latest United States decennial census, the value of GREATER BOSTON'S MANUFACTURED PRODUCTS INCREASED 56 per cent.

Does that spell anything but healthy, splendid growth?

Boston is JUST BEGINNING TO GROW. Boston is about to enter upon a period of EXTRAORDINARY DEVELOPMENT, due in part, no doubt, to the opening of the Panama Canal, the extension of our trade with South American nations, and the fact that the United States is about to enjoy an era of UNEXAMPLED PROSPERITY.

There are many things about Boston that ALL Bostonians ought to know—and here we have in mind not the municipal Boston, but that GREATER BOSTON of 1,500,000 people.

THIS Boston is the FOURTH CITY IN THE UNITED STATES, THE TENTH IN THE WHOLE WORLD.

Within 100 miles of the Massachusetts State House there are 1,200 CITIES AND TOWNS; within fifty miles, MORE PEOPLE THAN CAN BE FOUND WITHIN THE SAME DISTANCE FROM ANY OTHER CITY IN THIS COUNTRY EXCEPT NEW YORK.

Boston is the second port of the country.

Boston is the largest market of hides and leather in the world.

Boston is the greatest fresh fish market in the United States.

Boston is the greatest wool market in the country.

Boston is the fourth greatest industrial district in the country.

Boston's industries are growing faster than those of any other large city in America, except New York.

Boston has more varied industries than any other American city.

Boston is the greatest shoe centre in the world.

Boston has one of the largest shipbuilding plants in the country.

Boston leads the United States in the manufacture of confectionery—quality as well as quantity.

Boston is the greatest chocolate manufacturing city in the country.

Boston stands first in the manufacture of rubber and elastic goods.

Music in Boston & From the London Sketch

THERE is much pleasant anticipation of a great musical season in Boston, where Dr. Karl Muck is coming to direct the fortunes of the famous Symphony Orchestra in succession to Max Fiedler, who has held the baton throughout the past four seasons. In order to return to Boston—he was there from 1906 to 1908—Dr. Muck has resigned the high office of General Music Director to the Royal Opera House in Berlin, where his loss will be severely felt, for not only has he directed the important Wagner operas there, but he had the honor of producing Dr. Richard Strauss' successful work, "Der Rosenkavalier." In addition to his labors in Berlin, Dr. Muck has conducted the performances of "Parsifal" at Bayreuth, and in June last he presided over the Lower Rhenish Music Festival at Aachen. In connection with his departure from Germany, there will be two gala performances at the Berlin Opera House next month.

The seats for the Symphony Concerts are put up to auction in Boston, and there will be a four-days' sale at the end of September and beginning of October. The Symphony concerts are preceded by a public rehearsal—a practice that, while it cannot be very useful financially, in view of the low price charged, has a certain educational value which, we may be sure, is not overlooked. The fine concert hall, one of the best public buildings in Boston, is undoubtedly the Mecca of serious American musicians between October and May.

During a brief and hurried visit to North America I took time to visit Boston and was fortunate enough to find the concert-hall open. The regular season was over and promenade concerts ruled under the energetic direction of Gustav Strube, but though the programs were not of a very serious or even interesting order, and the orchestra was reduced, it was possible to enjoy long crevings in a concert hall of rare beauty and noble proportions and to admire, if not the quality of the music presented, the quality of the instruments that helped the presentation. Koch seemed to be the best of its kind, and the resultant beauty of tone could not be disguised.

It is not fair to criticise performances freshly designed to be popular; the players do not show to advantage, nor did Mr. Strube's readings of the more serious items always commend themselves. Yet, in spite of all disadvantages, the Symphony players were clearly men of mark, and left one at least of their audience with a sincere regret that he had not heard them under the direction of a conductor of world-wide renown.

Another source of strength to the orchestra is the legitimate pride that Bostonians take in it. The expenses are beyond the covering power of subscriptions, but the deficit is found by the endowment given by Mr. Henry Lee Higginson, one of the city's rich men, who has been quite content to pay for the city's pride of place.

New York may lead in the realm of opera, but, as far as absolute music is concerned, Boston stands alone. The best of the world's soloists find their way to Symphony Hall during the season, so that nothing is lacking to complete the attractions.

The list of great musicians who have looked after the interests of the orchestra is an imposing one. Georg Henschel was the first (1881-4), and he was followed by Wilhelm Gericke, Arthur Nikisch, Emil Paur, Gericke again, Dr. Karl Muck, and Mr. Max Fiedler.

The Boston Symphony players are not only well provided for by the administration, but they have their own pension fund, and two concerts are given annually for its benefit. Everything is done to make the players feel that they have fixity of tenure in their office and a measure of security against the latter days. This must have done much in the past, and must be doing much in the present, to make for a measure of ease that every musician should enjoy.

Only a rich city, and one with public-spirited men in it, could carry on work that is designed to be good rather than profitable; there have been years when the deficit has approached £2,000, but it has been cheerfully met.

The chief items of outlay are, of course, the conductor and the soloists, and the fee paid to the first-named is one of the prizes of the musical profession. It is not for a modest sum that one of the great lights of the European world of music crosses the Atlantic even to conduct a fine orchestra in a concert hall that is probably second to none.

And Then There's Another Pennant We Want for Boston

Boston has the finest watch factory in the world.

Boston has the most complete baking establishment in the country.

Boston is the leading textile centre in the country, second largest in the world.

Workmen employed in the industries which centre in Boston have an average earning power greater by 80 per cent. than that of the wage earners of the country at large.

Boston is a leader in legislation for the welfare of the people and for industrial peace.

Boston has the most attractive park system of any city in the country.

Boston is America's favorite convention city.

Boston is one of the healthiest cities in the country.

Boston is the gateway to the New England Summer resorts.

Boston has the finest public library in the world.

Boston has the greatest university in the country.

Boston has the greatest law school in the world.

Boston has the best equipped medical school in the world.

Boston has one of the finest art museums in the country.

Boston has the finest public orchestra in the country.

Boston's grand opera house and opera company rank with the best in the country, and are famous the world over.

Boston has a unique floating hospital for sick children. (Memo. Do something for it today).

Boston has the largest and finest arboretum in the world.

Boston is historically the most famous city in the country.

Boston is the birthplace of the American nation.

Many of these facts have been stated before—and time and time again in the publications of the greatest commercial organization of the East, the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

They are worthy of FREQUENT REPETITION. They ought to inspire the business men of Boston—still speaking of that Greater Boston—and more especially the YOUNG business men.

IT IS TRUE that Boston is a city of tradition, of proud, noble traditions. None would have her otherwise.

IT IS NOT TRUE that Boston feeds upon tradition.

Boston is a GREAT, GROWING, VITAL BUSINESS CENTRE, and the Bostonian who does not know it, who fails to take a man's part in her wonderful growth, is a pitiable duliard. The chances are that geography will not help him, after all.

The BUSINESS YEAR BEGINS WITH THE FALL, just as the scholastic year begins. The opening of the business year is a GOOD TIME TO THINK OF THESE THINGS, to move forward, all together, not unmindful of a glorious past, but facing an EVEN MORE GLORIOUS FUTURE.

Unless all signs fail, Boston in the realm of sport is about to put away the championship pennant of one of the baseball leagues. Some of our baseball experts tell us that this feat will be followed by the winning of a WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP.

An auspicious time, it seems to the AMERICAN, for the business men of Boston, aided by their good and loyal friends throughout New England, to go after the pennant in the GREAT WORLD LEAGUE OF BUSINESS.

It CAN be done. It WILL BE DONE IF YOU SAY SO.

LOVE'S SUPREMACY

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal Examiner

AS yon great sun in his supreme condition
Absorbs small worlds and makes them all his own,
So does my love absorb each vain ambition,
Each outside purpose which my life has known.
Stars cannot shine so near that vast orb'd splendor;
They are content to feed his flames of fire;
And so my heart is satisfied to render
Its strength, its all, to meet thy strong desire.

As in a forest when dead leaves are falling
From all save some perennial green tree,
So one by one I find all pleasures palling
That are not linked with or enjoyed by thee.
And all the homage that the world may proffer,
I take as perfumed oils or incense sweet.
And think of it as one thing more to offer,
And sacrifice to Love, at thy dear feet.

I love myself because thou art my lover,
My name seems dear since uttered by thy voice;
Yet, argus-eyed, I watch and would discover
Each blemish in the object of thy choice.
I coldly sit in judgment on each error;
To my soul's gaze I hold each fault of me,
Until my pride is lost in abject terror,
Lest I become inadequate to thee.

Like some swift-rushing and sea-seeking river,
Which gathers force the farther on it goes,
So does the current of my love forever
Find added strength and beauty as it flows.
The more I give, the more remains for giving,
The more receive, the more remains to win.
Ah! only in eternities of living
Will life be long enough to love thee in.
